LIFELONG VALENTINES

■ Modesto couple returns to honeymoon hotel in Carmel on 50th anniversary

By SUSAN BECK

ON A stormy February night 50 years ago, Jim and Lorraine Brughelli drove from Modesto to spend their honeymoon at the Hotel La Ribera in Carmel.

And nearly every year since then the couple has celebrated their wedding anniversary in the village, but never at their original honeymoon hotel, which today is better known as the Cypress Inn.

"I was superstitious about going back," said Jim, 73, a retired field representative for E & J Gallo in Modesto. "We've walked by and looked in, but never set foot inside."

This year the superstition gave way to sentimentality. After five decades of happily married life, the Brughellis accepted a 50th wedding anniversary gift from their three children — Linda, Jim and John — who arranged for their parents to stay at Cypress Inn, located on Lincoln and Seventh, last weekend.

Their upstairs room facing the Pacific Ocean was the same one they shared on their wedding night Feb. 9, 1947.

"The room was more simple then," Lorraine recalled as she and her husband reminisced last Saturday afternoon near a cozy fire in the lobby of the Cypress Inn.

The Brughellis also remembered that the hotel bill for their five-day honeymoon was about $35.

"And that included breakfast and dinner," Jim noted.

They recalled holding hands on long walks through the village, stopping in all of the shops along the way. They took Mediterranean Market-packed picnic lunches to Carmel Beach and drove through 17 Mile Drive. They had lunch at Mike's on Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey and dinner at Rocky Point in Big Sur.

"We loved it here," said Lorraine, a homemaker and proud grandmother of five grandchildren.

"It's difficult to put into words," Jim added. "We had an instant love affair with the town."

First dance

And that's exactly how they felt about each other when the two first met in 1944 at a dance at the California Ballroom in Modesto.

Although Jim was introduced to Lorraine early on, he waited until the end of the evening to ask her to dance.

"I had a few lined up," he said with a chuckle.

"I was excited when I met him," said Lorraine, 67, as

With Coldwell Banker's purchase, PB Co. parent firm out of brokerage business

By PAUL WOLF

WITH RESORTS to operate and a new residential-golf development to plan and fight for, the Lone Cypress Co. has gotten out of the real estate brokerage business.

The result: Del Monte Realty, owned by Lone Cypress until this week, has been acquired by the parent firm of Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage.

A new outfit — with six offices and 115 sales associates in Carmel, Monterey, Pacific Grove and Pebble Beach — will be known as Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty.

What has happened is that the No. 1 brokerage firm in the area has been absorbed by the No. 2 firm.

The acquisition has occurred at a time when reports have been circulating about a pending sale of the Pebble Beach Co., which a top official dismisses as out-of-control gossip.

An exasperated Paul Leach, Lone Cypress managing director, said there is no basis whatsoever for the rumors as well as Associated Press and Los Angeles Times reports. Rumors of a sale have never really stopped over the company's five-year ownership span. "I have no idea how the rumors got started."

About the sale of Del Monte Realty, Leach said. "Real estate brokerage is not a core business for us and our resort operations. They (National Realty Trust of Mission Viejo, Coldwell's parent firm) made us an offer we couldn't refuse. Now we can move some capital to other things."

The cost of the acquisition was not made public and is "confidential," according to Robert Arrigoni, president and chief executive officer of National Realty Trust.

He said the acquisition, roughly two months in the making, allows Coldwell to pick up market share in areas formerly dominated by Del Monte Realty, such as Pebble Beach.

Arrigoni said the merger will be accompanied by no layoffs. "There is going to be no streamlining or downsizing. If anything, we (Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty) may be adding a few people as additional management."

Another "plus," Arrigoni said, will be new house-hunting services available to all clients served formerly by two

Call it just a concept, but Sunset renovation takes shape

By PAUL WOLF

MAKE NO mistake, it's a "concept," not a project — and there is a big difference.

A concept is an idea, without details and costs and an actual architect to flesh out the vision.

But with the Carmel City Council's commitment last week to pursue the "BOOR/A Mitigated" plan for the aging Sunset Center Theater complex, city officials are moving ahead decisively with one concept in particular.

BOOR/A is the name of the Portland-based architectural firm that is likely to be one of those in the running for the eventual contract. Currently, there is no project and no chosen architect as yet, but the council is behind the BOOR/A plan.

The city's first task is to meet with the nonprofit fund-raising organization, Sunset Center for the Arts, and develop a strategy for securing roughly $12.9 million for the renovation.

"Everybody's lined up to do this, but the city and the nonprofit still haven't sat down and talked about the nature of their relationship," said Carmel Cultural Director Brian Donoghue. "This is an awful lot of money and it isn't just done with a wink and a handshake."

With the council's 5-0 action, some fairly specific requirements have been laid down. And certain features of the renovation can be expected, based on the council's concept selection.

They include:

■ Preserving the basic look and character of the complex, even though most of the old building will be torn down. The initial design concept preserves the gothic-style entryway and many interior design motifs.

Sunset Center would be shiny and new, but its appearance would not be reconceived.

BEFORE SYMPATHETIC CARMEL AUDIENCE, NEA OFFICIAL DRAWS BLEAK PICTURE FOR ARTS FUNDING

By PAUL WOLF

WITH A mixture of resignation and defiance, a high-ranking official with the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) told a Carmel audience that only the people and their legislators can save the struggling agency.

Gigi Bradford

Before an audience that could not have been more sympathetic to the challenges facing the nonprofit arts world, Gigi Bradford, director of the NEA's Literature Program, told a gathering of the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation

Thursday, Feb. 6, that she could not lobby legislators.

That's the job of the public and other organizations.

"Let me just put it this way: If you have opinions about the funding of the NEA, you should inform your legislators," she told the gathering of about 30, which met at the Pine Inn's Il Fornaio restaurant.

Bradford described a bleak picture: The endowment's current annual budget is now only $99 million, or roughly 60 percent of what it was two federal budget cycles ago.

Taxpayers pay $1 to the NEA out of every $1,000 they pay in federal taxes, she said.

"The nonprofit arts world is a $37 billion industry in this country, and our investment is only $99 million," Bradford said.

Uncertain future

Worse still, there is a good chance Congress may decide to eliminate the agency entirely come the new budget year, Oct. 1.

Ironically, Bradford said, the public response to reduced funding for the arts in this country has not been an increase of private donations; surprisingly, donations have fallen off in the last few years, in part because of negative press the NEA has received because of a few controversial grants it has made.

"Many people out there have this impression that we are a bunch of bureaucrats sitting around making grants to our friends," Bradford explained. "That isn't so. We have panels that must follow strict guidelines. Certainly, I have strong opinions about what should be funded, but I am not part of the process. That is not my job."

With the continued downsizing of the federal government, the states can be expected to receive pressure to make up for lost federal funding. Bradford suggested that state funding will be no more reliable than the quickly drying up federal dollars.

Hella Langer, 96 years young.

HELLA-VA LADY

Langer's live-longer secret

So you're looking for a can't-miss recipe for longevity? You've decided you prefer living to what-ever comes next?

Well you've come to the right column for sure this week — for today's guest may be Carmel's quintessential authority on hanging in there for the long haul!

Joe Fitzpatrick

SHE is 96-year-old Hella Langer, owner, operator, proprietor, buyer, chief sales person, bookkeeper, resident philosopher, etc., of Langer's Antiques on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh!

Hella has a simple, three-step program for longevity — and you don't even have to attend any meetings! Here it is: First, you must have good genes.

Second, you have to maintain a positive attitude, no matter what.

Third, you've got to drink one glass of champagne with dinner every night. (Wine won't do — too acidic, she says.)

Any particular brand of champagne? "Yes," replies Hella with a chuckle, "the CHEAPEST one!"

A BUOYANT, razor-sharp lady with ready wit — who puts in eight hours a day, six days a week, at her shop — Hella takes off tomorrow for her 39th annual buying trip to Denmark and Germany.

Yes, she goes alone, but is met at the airport in Copenhagen and also in Frankfurt by antique dealers she has dealt with for years. This trip, she'll concentrate mostly on replenishing her supply of demitasse cups, regular coffee cups, tea cups and the famed Danish Christmas plates.

SHE personally selects every piece that goes into her shop because, "If I don't like a piece, how can I sell it to someone?" Trendy she's not.

"I've got to watch myself over there this year," she said, "because last year I broke my elbow in a revolving door and spent three weeks in a Danish hospital, and I don't even speak Danish!"

SHE'LL be gone two weeks, and when she gets back she'll hie off to Palm Springs for a couple of weeks to warm up — "It gets really cold in Denmark and Germany this time of year," she explained.

Born in Germany in 1900, she fled Hitler for Holland in 1933, and she and her late husband (he died in 1972) came to the U.S. in 1937 and settled in Carmel 20 years later.

BESIDES Danish and German china, art objects and glass, Hella loves classical music — especially Mozart — and is an active, enthusiastic Democrat.

She has never MET a U.S. president, although she has received Happy Birthday letters from George Bush and Bill Clinton in the past.

BUT hey, if President Clinton comes to Carmel, "I would hope he might come to my shop, because I can't go to Washington very well."

(White House listening posts please copy.)

Said her assistant, Janet Greene, who will run the shop in Hella's absence, "Isn't she incredible?"

A colossal understatement.

Youth Center looking at more than $50,000 boon following AT&T golf, Eastwood gala

By JERRY STEWART

THE LAST TWO weeks have been extremely busy for Pat Lenz, executive director of the Carmel Youth Center. But they also have been very profitable.

During the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, which concluded Feb. 2, Lenz and more than 300 volunteers were busy feeding the thousands of hungry spectators who attended the golf tournament.

And last Thursday night, Lenz and a bevy of volunteers coordinated a premiere screening of Clint Eastwood's new film, "Absolute Power," at Galaxy 6 Cinemas in Monterey.

Nearly 400 tickets were sold at a price of $100 per person with the proceeds — $30,000 after expenses, Lenz said — being evenly split between the Carmel Youth Center and the Variety Club, a southern California-based charity

Setting the record straight

HERE STAND two corrections of stories published in last week's issue of The Pine Cone:

■ In a tribute obituary for Carmelite Iona Logie, it was reported that she "donated the main residence of her Casanova Street property to the YWCA, making her home in the guest unit of the property."

The newspaper has been informed that she sold both her home and guest cottage and moved into her former guest cottage as a renter.

She did, however, donate generous amounts of money to the YWCA and other organizations from the proceeds of the property sale.

■ In a report on Measure A, the POWR initiative, it was reported that Ed Lee is a supporter of the measure and an opponent of a new dam on the Carmel River. In fact, Lee is just the opposite — an opponent of Measure A and a supporter of a dam.

Vehicle break-ins 'in vogue' as Carmel can attest

By PAUL WOLF

THERE APPEARS to be little slowing down in the rash of car burglaries that has plagued Carmel-by-the-Sea since before late last year.

Sometime between Saturday evening and Sunday morning, a 1992 Honda Civic was broken into, and items valued at $2,065 were stolen, according to Carmel Police Detective Pete Poitras.

A window was smashed, apparently by means of the so-called "shatter rock" method, which involves breaking the glass with the hard material of a spark plug, a particularly quiet means of shattering a window, the detective said.

The car was located at Camino Real and Santa Lucia, on the south end of the village.

The items stolen included a built-in car stereo, 75 CDs, a wetsuit and two surfboard leashes, according to Poitras.

The vehicle belonged to a man who was visiting from Stockton.

There are no suspects, and it is unclear whether the spate of about a dozen incidents in the village since the start of January are related.

These kinds of vehicle break-ins have been reported in increasing numbers throughout the Peninsula, leaving open the question of whether there is a true crime ring at work, according to Poitras.

"This crime is in vogue right now," he said. "Saturday's (break-in) is part of an ongoing series. There could be a group of people doing these crimes, but it is hard to say."

Poitras said area police are short on leads. In recent weeks, there was one eyewitness of an attempted car burglary, but no arrests were made. When the culprits recognized that they had been seen, they fled the scene before stealing anything.

Poitras said a number of reports have been made since late last year of items stolen from unlocked cars — a preventable crime.

BLAST AT THE BUCKEYE

400-plus turn out in effort to help keep library open; merchants, valley residents do their part to raise $8,000

By VIRGINIA PARKE

BUCKEYE has two meanings. One refers to a tree-like shrub indigenous to California known for producing large chestnuts. These nuts were boiled by the Native Americans and the meat ground and eaten. The toxic juice the buckeyes produced was dumped in the Carmel River to stun fish.

The other meaning refers to the former identity of the library in Carmel Valley Village. Not so long ago, it was The Buckeye, a popular eatery.

Friends of the Carmel Valley Library-sponsored "Evening at the Buckeye" put on an evening of musical entertainment, food and dancing last Saturday at the library. It was a benefit for the "Keep The Doors Open" fund for the Carmel Valley branch of the Monterey County Library.

More than 400 guests enjoyed the country/blues/swing-style music of Larry Hosford and Friends for the first part of the evening. Then A Nickel and A Nail Band took over while fans clapped and danced until midnight.

The committee was chaired by Barry Harrow and staffed by Neta Cobb, Peggy Henecks, Lori Kline, Nina Laub, Susan McDonald-Brody, Dorothy McEwen, Kathy Nielsen, Virginia Parke, Doug Pease and Mary Siquig. They report an estimated $8,000 was raised toward the $10,000 needed to keep the library doors open for a fifth day each week during the year.

The buffet was supplied by A Country Place, A Moveable Feast, Barbecue To Black Tie Catering, Bon Appetite Restaurant, Deli Treasures, Holman Ranch, Libby House, Jeffrey's Grill & Catering, Los Laureles Lodge, The Ridge Restaurant, River Rock Deli, Silver

Spoon Catering, Summerhouse Restaurant, Sweet Retreat, Taqueria Del Valle, Thai Bistro, Village Pizzeria, Sole Mio Trattoria and Wills Fargo Restaurant.

Many home-made dishes were also donated by Valley residents.

The enticing fragrance of chocolate drew other volunteers, including Mike Kucher, Wendy Matthews, Steve Moses, Connie Piersol, Jill Roberts, Sheila St. Germain, Carol Spense, Gary Stooksberry, Rosalie and Susanna Villucci, Gail Ward, Joan and John Zelinski.

The Central Coast is home for some of the finest vineyards in California and many donated beverages including Bernardus Winery, Durney Vineyard, Joullian Vineyards, and Ventana Vineyards. Big Sur Water, Carmel Valley Coffee Roasting Co. and Mid-Valley Safeway Store also contributed.

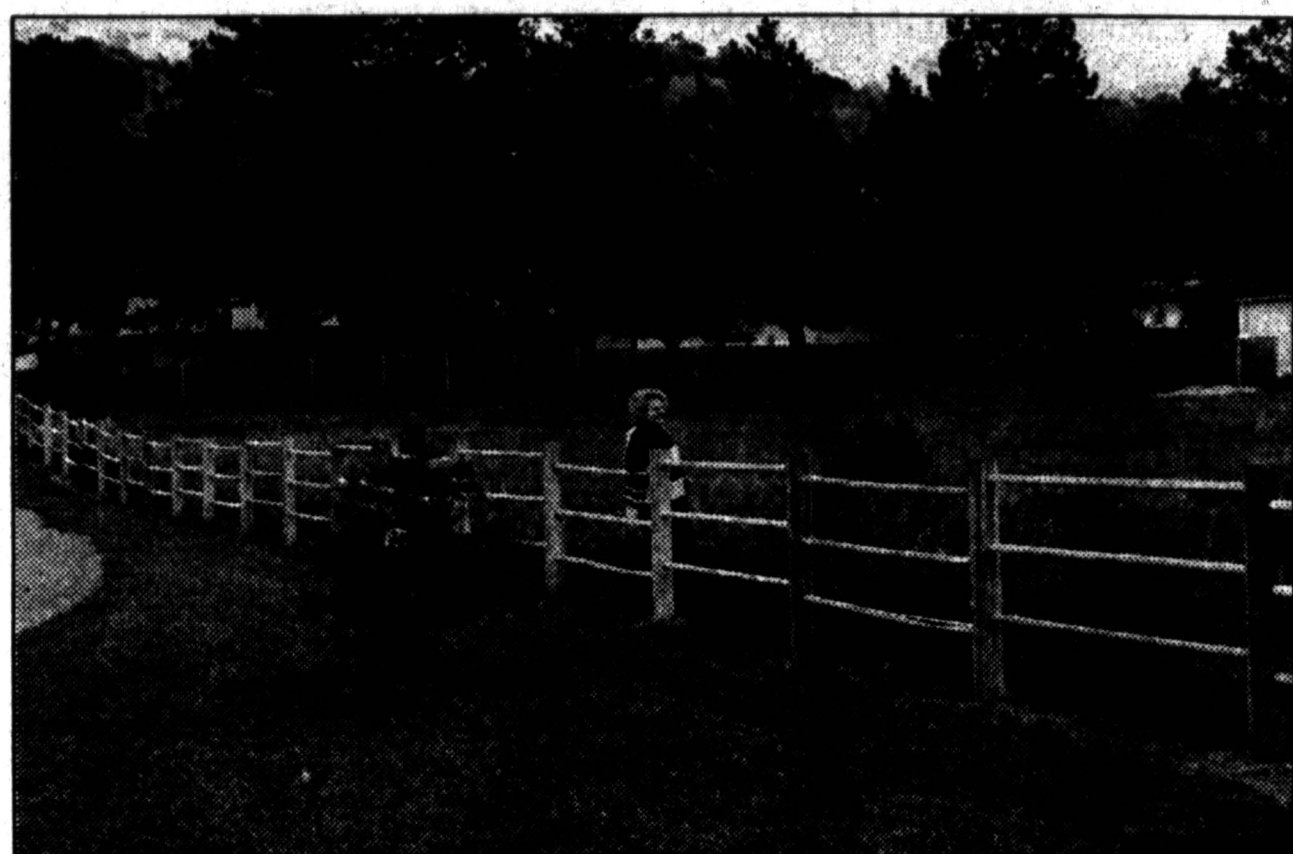

Decorations for the transformed library to its former restaurant environment were provided by Flowers Ltd. and an assortment of charming valentines produced by the Tulareitos classes of Mrs. Lyon, Handshy, Covell, Decker, Lawn, Thorngate, Langland, Miss Leavelle and Mr. Monnes. They will be on display at the library through Valentine's Day.

Contributing to the transformation, much to the amazement of the hard-working Carmel Valley Library staff, were A To Z Rental Center's party tent, lighting effects by Lee Rieman with Bill Conlan of Electrical Work, party equipment from the Pebble Beach Co., and banners from Digital Scribe. Others making this event an outstanding success included The Carmel Pine Cone, Carmel Valley Business Service and Watts Valley Glass.

Glowing candles lit the path to the parking lot manned by Carmel Valley and Cachagua Fire District volunteers Lee Warner, Jeff Trapp, Pat Dawd, Steve Moore, Ron Trout, Tom Brown, Mark Schlegel, Dave Chaney, Ed McAuley and Mark Johnson.

One of highlights of the evening was the benefit drawing for special Valentine's Day theme baskets. Contributing this year were Linens & Such, Skylonda Country Inn & Spas, Tickle Pink Inn, Peace Of My Heart Salon, Impressions Floral Designs, Bonnifide Soaps, Rainbow Scents, Holman Ranch and Highlands Inn Gift Shop.

A "stunning success indeed" according to Friends president, Susan McDonald-Brody as members of the committee gathered Sunday morning to transform the Buckeye back into a library.

Fund drive for Village park purchase picks up steam; $245,000 to go

By PAUL WOLF

IT HAS been bought and preserved for generations to come — pending one small but significant requirement: the repayment of the $250,000 loan that made the purchase possible.

The Carmel Valley Community Park Addition — a 1.4-acre parcel immediately adjacent to the existing community park — was bought last year by the Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee (CVVIC) for $554,000.

A loan from the First National Bank of Central California helped secure the final chunk of money needed for the acquisition.

The loan might be better described as an interest-only mortgage that will have run its course in August, according to CVVIC board member Randy Randazzo.

If the principal has not been paid off by August, the mortgage may have to be refinanced or an extension requested, he said.

By acquiring the land, the committee has prevented the development of a private self-storage facility. That private semi-industrial use was set to go as the former property owner had approvals in hand.

Currently, the land — located next to stunning recreation and park area — is fenced off on all sides. The grass field is located some 100 yards east of the gazebo and the American flag, two major landmarks at CV Community Park.

The land has been used as a parking area for the many special events held in the village and is likely to remain available for that purpose.

"We just want to keep this as part of the existing park," said Leslie Voss, a past chair and current board member of the CVVIC.

Healthy start

The fund-raising effort, Help Our Park, has gotten off to a healthy start, but most of the money has yet to be raised. Only $30,000 of the $275,000 ($25,000 in interest payments) needed has been raised so far.

"We've just gotten started," Voss said.

Proceeds from this year's Village Affair, the kick-off event Monday, Jan. 20, went to the Help Our Park effort. After expenses, the event raised about $27,000, according to Randazzo.

About 20 restaurants and nearly a dozen wineries donated food, wine and refreshments for the event, which included entertainment, prizes and a silent auction.

In years past, money raised at the event went to the CVVIC pathway improvements and landscaping projects.

The committee has sent out mailers urging residents and business people to chip in and make tax-deductible contributions to the committee to pay down the loan.

In addition, a thermometer has been placed alongside the park next to Carmel Valley Road to show the week-by-week progress of the fund drive.

This fact does not necessarily comfort those who have supported the "historic preservation" plan, which would have saved much of the edifice while improving the old school auditorium to a greater or less extent.

From San Carlos Street, the new building, as envisioned by BOOR/A, won't look too different from the old building, according to Donoghue.

One key difference is that the new building will be drawn out closer to San Carlos, thus gobbling up some of the parking spaces in the lot. (Donoghue noted, however, that some new spaces will be created in the process.)

The council has committed itself to keeping the height of the building roughly the same. Simultaneously, council members agree with the various city advisory commissions that there should not be a flat rooftop.

The first challenge of the architect will be to keep the roof level down but ensure that it is still attractive.

■ Enlarging the stage and wings.

This is a key component of any project, according to city officials, who point to the official "needs assessment" for the project.

The stage is so ill-suited to large musical groups that entire sections of an orchestra must sit out in the wings.

The rigging system will also be improved under any variation of the BOOR/A plan. At present, because there is no counterbalancing system, all props must be hoisted and moved around with brute force.

A 150-pound object requires the lifter, or lifters, to exert exactly that much force. A counterbalancing system allows that same object to be moved with less force. The current rigging is dangerous and a huge waste of time, according to Donoghue.

■ Improving the interior of the theater with the guidance of acoustical experts.

One of the council's firm requirements is that the architect — whoever is chosen — be a specialist in theater design. It is not enough, the council determined, that the architect simply retain theater design consultants.

The BOOR/A plan would lower the ground level of the stage, which would accomplish two things.

— It would increase the downhill grade of the auditorium, allowing everyone to see over the heads of the people seated in front of them.

— It would expand the auditorium by raising the ceiling height and lowering the floor, thus benefiting acoustics.

While the theater would be, in effect, more spacious, seating would be fixed at roughly the same 730 seats.

■ The foyer (lobby) will almost certainly be redesigned.

Currently, as one walks into the main entrance, one enters the foyer, which is a narrow strip running across the width of the building. After walking into the foyer, the theater entrance is located to the right.

The new foyer would include the same space going across the width of the building, but there would be a significant addition as well. Flanking the existing building would be more of foyer space in the area between the theater and the parking lot, making the foyer L-shaped.

unrelated firms. "This is the best of all worlds for the buying public," he said.

In 1996, sales volume for Del Monte Realty was $350 million; for Coldwell, it was $190 million.

Rita Lewis, vice president and managing broker of Del Monte Realty, will be appointed vice president and district manager for Coldwell Banker Del Monte Realty. She will report to Larry Knapp, president of Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage in Northern California.

Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage is the nation's largest real estate brokerage firm, with more than 300 offices and 13,400 sales associates.

Meanwhile, the Lone Cypress Co., parent company of the Pebble Beach Co., owns and operates Pebble Beach Resorts, which includes Pebble Beach Golf Links, The Lodge at Pebble Beach and The Inn at Spanish Bay.

Leach said the Pebble Beach Co. will have its hands full in the near future as it continues to move through the planning process for its controversial Pebble Beach Lot Program, which proposes 350 new homes and a new championship golf course.

Feb. 22 event slated for Panettas

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

IT WILL be time for Peninsulans to welcome home former White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta and his wife, Sylvia, during a reception next weekend in Monterey.

The "Welcome Home Reception" for the longtime 17th District Congressional representative, who gave up his seat in 1993 to become President Clinton's budget chief, will be held from 4 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 22 at the Monterey Conference Center.

Tickets may be requested through Tuesday by sending a check for $16/person and a self-addressed envelope to Welcome Home Panetta Reception, City Manager's Office, Monterey City Hall, Monterey 93940. Ticket request forms may also be dropped off in person at the office of Fred Meurer, city manager for Monterey.

Panetta, who was elevated midway through Clinton's first term to chief of staff and then resigned after helping the president get reelected, has been long rumored as a Democratic candidate for the California governor's race in 1998.

The Carmel Valley resident, who will be returning to the Peninsula after more than 20 years of political service in Washington, D.C., still has not announced his intentions to seek the seat currently held by Republican Pete Wilson.

More information on the Feb. 22 event can be obtained by calling 646-3418.

BRUGHELLIS: Celebrating golden anniversary

if it had happened yesterday. "I knew right away that I'd like to marry him. I never felt that way about anyone else."

It was different for Jim, too.

"I don't know how to explain it," he said. "I guess it was chemistry."

After they married two-and-a-half years later, Lorraine moved to the dairy farm Jim's father had bought in 1912. Eventually, the land was transformed into a vineyard and the 80-acre farm became the Brughelli Ranch.

"We've stayed in the same home for the past 50 years," Lorraine said. "We're not much for making changes."

So how does a couple who takes comfort in familiarity manage to keep their romance kindled?

Well, it always helps to remember your loved ones on Valentine's Day, which Jim and Lorraine have faithfully done throughout their marriage.

The Brughellis especially remember the time Jim bought a great big red heart-shaped Valentine filled with chocolates for Lorraine.

It was the first thing he did that day, so he left the candy box in his car while he took care of other business. When he returned, he was surprised to discover that his beloved dog had thoroughly enjoyed every piece of his wife's Valentine gift.

"We had a good laugh about that," Jim recalled.

Mutual respect

But both agreed what it's really all about is being respectful and forgiving and willing to give as well as to take.

"We've had a scrap or two," Jim said. "But everybody does that. There was a time when we didn't have a lot of money, but we worked hard and it made us stronger and closer. We've never vilified each other."

"We love each other," Lorraine added. "I've never loved another."

With 100 years of love between them, the dance of romance is just as strong as it was the first night Jim and Lorraine met more than 50 years ago.

And although last weekend's stay at Cypress Inn was a "test run" to challenge Jim's lingering superstition, it's likely the Brughellis will return to their honeymoon getaway in years to come.

"It feels good to be here," both agreed. "It's the whole experience. It's not possible to single out one flower in the whole bouquet."

Goph Albitz, who will close the doors of his jewelry store next weekend, has witnessed Carmel change over the years — 'it is more commercial now,' he observes.

Oregon-bound Goph Albitz has watched Carmel turn into hot spot for jewelry

By PAUL WOLF

THE QUIET little village that has so many distinctions — arts capital, former bohemian writers' colony, home to many stars, environmental treasure — has earned another distinction: Jewelry mecca.

So notes a longtime jeweler and jewelry craftsman, Goph Albitz, who is leaving town after two decades in the business and heading for Bend, Ore.

The doors of his 600 square-foot retail shop, Goph Albitz Designs, on Mission and Sixth, will close on Feb. 22, and a new jewelry business will move in.

"In my time here, Carmel has become a destination for jewelry buyers," said Albitz, who was an independent designer and wholesaler before he opened the retail shop in 1989.

"I have heard about a lot of people who actually save up their money to come back to Carmel and buy jewelry," he said. "I think it is great. They know where they can go to get fine jewelry."

Albitz, who cuts his own stones and specializes in contemporary jewelry, already has a studio set up in Oregon. He will not establish a retail operation up north, and he hopes that, as a craftsman, "I

Russian travelers hit Peninsula on world tour for peace

By SUSAN BECK

LIKE CHILDREN at a circus, wide-eyed motorists smiled and waved as they passed the horse-drawn gypsy wagon clipping along Highway 1 in Big Sur Friday morning.

Guided by two Russian men and their dog, Chip, who barked orders from the driver's seat, the Belgian draft horses from Pennsylvania's Amish country kept a steady pace as they pulled the 4,000-pound wagon covered with messages advocating peace, love and environmental preservation.

For Petr Plonin, 45, and Nikolay Davidovsky, 41, it was just another day in their journey that began five years ago, when the geologist and economist first trekked 8,000 miles across Siberia on the "Horse-Drawn World Tour" international expedition.

While that leg of the journey put them in the Guinness Book of World Records, their European tour was rewarded with warm greetings from local dignitaries and handsome donations.

The odyssey began in the Ivanovo region of central Russia, where both men have families awaiting their return.

The purpose of the world tour is to heighten awareness of the diminishing populations of wild and domestic animals and birds; and to recognize the need to preserve traditions and customs that strengthen moral, spiritual and ecological consciousness.

Using horses to capture people's hearts, Plonin and Davidovsky hope to remind humanity that the "slower you are going, the farther you are reaching."

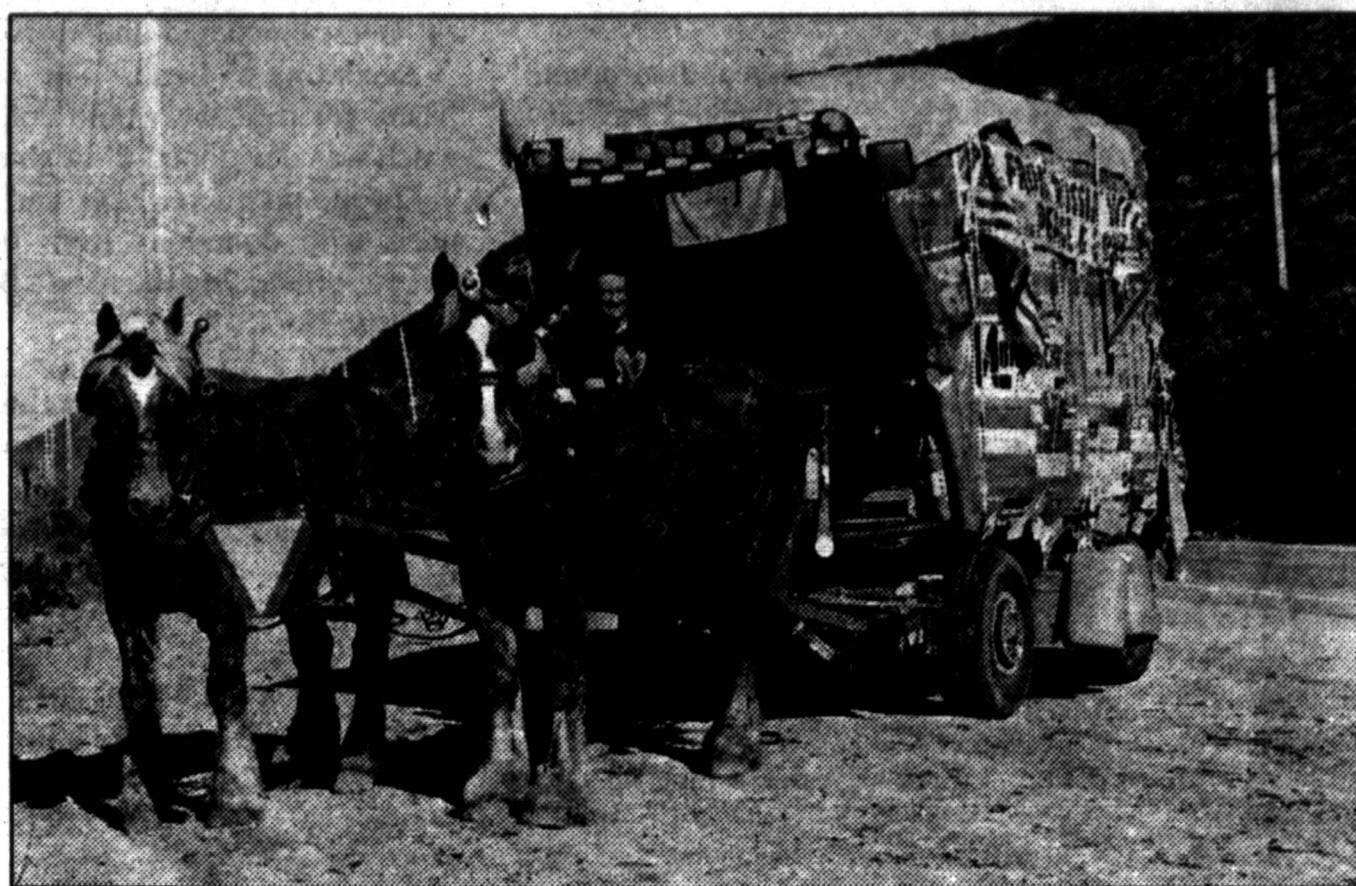

On June 15, 1995 the expedition arrived in New York by boat and has since made its way through Washington, D.C., south to Georgia, and west to Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Los Angeles.

Despite a few setbacks along the way, the Russians have been welcomed with opened arms and donations, including feed and veterinarian care for the horses, Andy, 16, and Jane, 15.

The heart-warming caravan is now headed toward San Francisco, Canada, Alaska and then home to Russia. The world-peace and Mother Earth preservationists would like to return to their homeland via Japan, but it would cost about $7,000.

And after that? "We'd love to cross Australia," Davidovsky said as he glided ahead of Plonin, Andy, Jane and Chip on his in-line skates, wearing a neon outfit and waving an orange flag to warn motorists that a peace movement was coming their way.

can expand my horizons."

Albitz noted that the rise of chain stores and corporate enterprises in Carmel over the past two decades has hurt small-time independent craftspeople.

"Carmel is a wonderful town, and it's been very good to me," Albitz said. "But it is not the same place it once was for working craftsman. It is more commercial now."

Despite these regrets, Albitz is a believer in free enterprise and looks favorably on Carmel's evolution into a jewelry hot spot. Twenty years ago, Carmel had just nine jewelry stores, and now it has 32.

That number 32 is actually rather significant. That is the City of Carmel's official limit for jewelry stores, as codified by the 1993 commercial rezoning legislation, approved by local voters in the form of Measure H.

Albitz looks skeptically at the City of Carmel's legal limit for jewelry operations, characterizing it as a limit on free enterprise. In the long run, however, the limit may keep the quality of jewelry stores high in Carmel, he said.

YOUTH CENTER

for handicapped and underprivileged children.

According to Lenz, "The deal was: For us to use the theater for free, we would contribute to the Variety Club, which was developed through show business."

For the premiere, Lenz and the youth center were provided with donations from many local restaurants and wineries, including the Hog's Breath Inn, Fresh Cream and Smith & Hook.

"We got a lot of donations, but we still had to pay for things, such as printing costs and setting up the event," said Lenz, who nonetheless was thrilled with the $15,000 donation to the CYC.

As he has for many years, Eastwood, director and star of "Absolute Power" and chairman of the Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation, governing body of the AT&T tourney, has done his part to help the youth center.

"He's been helping us for a long time," said Lenz. "He doesn't just give us a blank check. He'll use his contacts to help us."

"And he's not the only one. There are also other people in the community who do the same thing."

The AT&T

As for the CYC's food concession sales at the AT&T, a tradition it has been carrying on since 1950, Lenz said the tournament will soon advise the center of what it earned for its '97 efforts.

"Our best year — two years ago — we made $40,000," Lenz noted. "We're hoping for that, and even more."

Since record crowds turned out for this year's event — spurred on by the sunny weather, last year's rainout and Tiger Woods' shining star — it is likely the CYC may surpass its all-time high profits at the concession booth.

"With the money raised from these two events," Lenz said, "we'll be able to expand the staff and extend our hours."

The executive director, who also coaches the girls varsity soccer team at Carmel High School, said one goal the center intends to realize is the introduction of a new soccer league program for kids this spring.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Until this year, people with 401(k) or Keogh retirement accounts were required by the IRS to start making taxable withdrawals once they reach age 70 1/2. New legislation changes that. Now they need not make withdrawals as long as they continue to work, full-time or part-time, and meet criteria for such plans. There are a few exceptions. If you don't get word of this new option from institutions handling such accounts, request information as to how this affects you and how you can benefit.

Not all cowboy-type horsemen live in Texas. Vince Treaster saddles up in Potter's Mills, Pennsylvania, a town so remote it didn't get electricity until 1958. At 74, he is renowned for his ability to turn ornery horses into star performers. He has other skills: With a .22 caliber rifle he hits tossed pennies two out of three times. Health problems? He has a ready answer: he'll quit when he can't get on a horse anymore. (He has taught his horse to lie down so he can mount up.)

Remember When? January 29, 1979 — With the renewal of diplomatic relations, President Carter received China leader Deng Xiaoping at the White House.

restaurateurs Domenico and Sol Vastarella (of Sole Mio Italian restaurant), and ran it full page, full color, last week.

It was beautiful and had only one thing missing — Domenico! Oh, his right hand was in there, but that was all. The rest of the picture was entirely of his comely wife, Sol.

WAS Domenico miffed by this puzzling omission?

"No," he said, hurling himself on the floor, pounding his fists and shouting Caprian epithets (the only two words of which I understood were "cement shoes.")

WITHIN 10 minutes or so, he gamely rose to his feet and said calmly, "I know she's prettier than I am ... but ... but I never expected THIS!"

As I left with a sympathetic wave goodbye, he was back on the floor again and I was left to ponder what in the name of Ned "cement shoes" had to do with anything.

(No, I actually made some of that up. He took it very well, and the doctors say he'll be able to have visitors within a few more days.)

Meanwhile, while you're waiting, try Sole Mio's ambrosial Capellini Campagnola. It's just what the doctor ordered!

SPEAKING of pictures, that one of Clint Eastwood on the front page of last week's Pine Cone with a headline over it saying, "Absolute Power," caused some lively comment. This column alone received 11 phone calls and three in-person Did-you-see-thats.

The picture contained what amounted to an optical illusion caused by shadows and a crease on the front of his golf trousers. This wasn't apparent in the glossy print, but when it came out on newsprint the shadows took on a startling life of their own, a phenomenon which could not be anticipated.

AND if the merry folks at Coast Weekly are chortling at our discomfort on this, may I point out to them that at least we got both arms and his face in there and didn't cut anything off!

CONCERNING this column's remark last week, "the Peninsula apologizes to the incredible Tiger Woods" for an unfair trashing by a Bland new sportswriter: A gentleman identifying himself as "William (Bill) Hogan" (no relation, please, to The Pine Cone's golf columnist of the same name, who last week chided the Bland columnist as one of the '97 tournament's "losers") rang up to say he and his nine-member coffee club DO NOT join in any such apology.

"I estimate," said Hogan, "that at least 40 percent of the pros and spectators don't like Tiger Woods at all." Why, he didn't say.

"DOES your dislike of Tiger then justify his being trashed with guilt by association?" we asked.

"I haven't researched that," the man who called himself Hogan replied, "so I can't comment on it."

GEE, what could it possibly be that would make some people immediately dislike the young, superbly talented, non-threatening Tiger Woods?

PIZZAZZ ON FREMONT

Tomorrow on Valentine's Day, car buff's here will be getting their first look at a roller-skate-size Mercedes-Benz convertible that will steal your heart (if not your wallet) away!

It's called the SLK 230, and will be on display and for sale at Stahl Motors in Monterey, the only Mercedes dealer in the Monterey-Santa Cruz-San Benito tri-county area.

BILL Stahl, dealership owner, and George Mahi, a good guy salesman (that is not an oxymoron), are only two of the crew there who are nuts about this little rascal!

It's a two-seater with 185 horsepower, supercharged, and with a hard top that goes down (and tucks itself into the trunk) and back up at the touch of single button — locking itself into position at either point.

ONE advantage to this little gem is you don't have to worry about finding a parking place. When you get where you're going, you just put it in your pocket or purse and take it with you! (No, I lied. It isn't quite THAT small.)

The one they have at Stahl right now is silver, with red and black leather interior — cute as a bug. But the heady attraction to me is that it also comes in bright YELLOW, the absolute zenith of car colors in my book! (Why don't all car manufacturers SEE this?)

ANYWAY, I drove the little silver scalawag, fell in love, and darn near tucked it in my pocket to take home — except I didn't have the $39,700 base price! (Or anything close. They don't accept lint and moths as legal tender.) C'est la guerre.

KCBA general manager Mark Faylor says the reason the station cut back its lone local news program (10 p.m.) from one hour to a half hour is that ratings over the past few years have shown the program loses about 30 percent of its audience between 10:30 and 11 p.m.

"So we cut it back to make it a tighter, faster-moving news in a shorter time period," he said. "We want to get in, hit the news hard and get out."

SAN FRANCISCO, dear friends, is a town with style, panache and that over-worked old favorite — class.

Its blithe, city-wide sendoff last Friday for the Chronicle's beloved columnist, Herb Caen (who died the previous week-end), was the stuff of fairy tales and warmth of spirit and generalized good cheer.

BUT cities — whole cities — don't do that, do they? I can't imagine Minneapolis or Cleveland or Oakland or even New York coming together with singleness of purpose — and without self-consciousness — to celebrate a life in such a blissful way.

This was an "only in San Francisco" thing, and San Francisco is different. Herb often wrote, "God, I love this town!" Clearly, this town loved him back.

HE was perfect for San Francisco, and vice versa. There will never be another marriage like that one in our lifetimes.

Herb Caen, a caring, decent man ... San Francisco, a caring, decent city.

P.S. - I await with all sorts of trepidation a call from Hogan saying San Francisco is the pits, and his coffee club and 40 percent of the rest of the people around here wouldn't go near it on a bet! C'est la guerre.

Alisal stays atop MTAL with heart-stopping win over Pirate boys, 63-60

By ABRAM TROSKY
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

THE BATTLE for bragging rights on the Peninsula continues Friday when the Robert Louis Stevenson boys basketball team plays host to Carmel at 7 p.m.

The down-to-the-wire action of the two teams' last meeting forebodes another exciting contest this time around.

In a game that tipped off Wednesday night after Pine Cone press deadline, the Pirates visited their other neighbors, Pacific Grove. Locked at 7-3, RLS and PG were tied for third in the MTAL before met up.

Last Friday, Stevenson had the chance to wrest first place from defending league champ Alisal (9-1). The Trojans, who are an impressive 25-1 in league over the last two years, narrowly avoided suffering a second blemish at the hands of the Pirates in their near-perfect MTAL campaign.

Last-minute heroics saved Alisal from being dethroned.

Trojan center Pancho Carriedo tied the score at 60 with two minutes left after missing a clutch layup, thus snuffing the brief Pirate lead that had crowned their steady comeback from a seven-point deficit at the half.

The two teams had been feverishly trading baskets up to that point, until Stevenson head coach Bill Hankison made the call to slow the pace down, spread the floor, hold the ball, and vie for the last shot.

Point guard Jason Ware, who had 17 for the third consecutive game, took a 10-foot jumper with 15 seconds left and watched the ball go in and out of the fickle rim.

Darnell Bryant was subsequently fouled in transition and hit both free-throws for the last two of his 12 points.

One basket down and 10 seconds on the clock, the Pirates put the ball in the hands of Jason Reid, who elevated just in front of the three-point line only to have his shot partially blocked by Alisal guard Rick Orozco, who was immediately fouled.

Orozco hit one of the two free throws to cap off the scoring at 63-60.

Friday's RLS-Carmel game also can be heard on KSPB-FM 91.9.

CHS gunning for pride as season winds to close

By PATRICK FOUUDY

TWO MORE games down, two more losses for the Carmel High School boys varsity basketball team, which is clawing its way through a dismal 1-9 season (5-15 overall). With only three games remaining, little can be turned around in the standings, but a lot can be turned around in terms of pride.

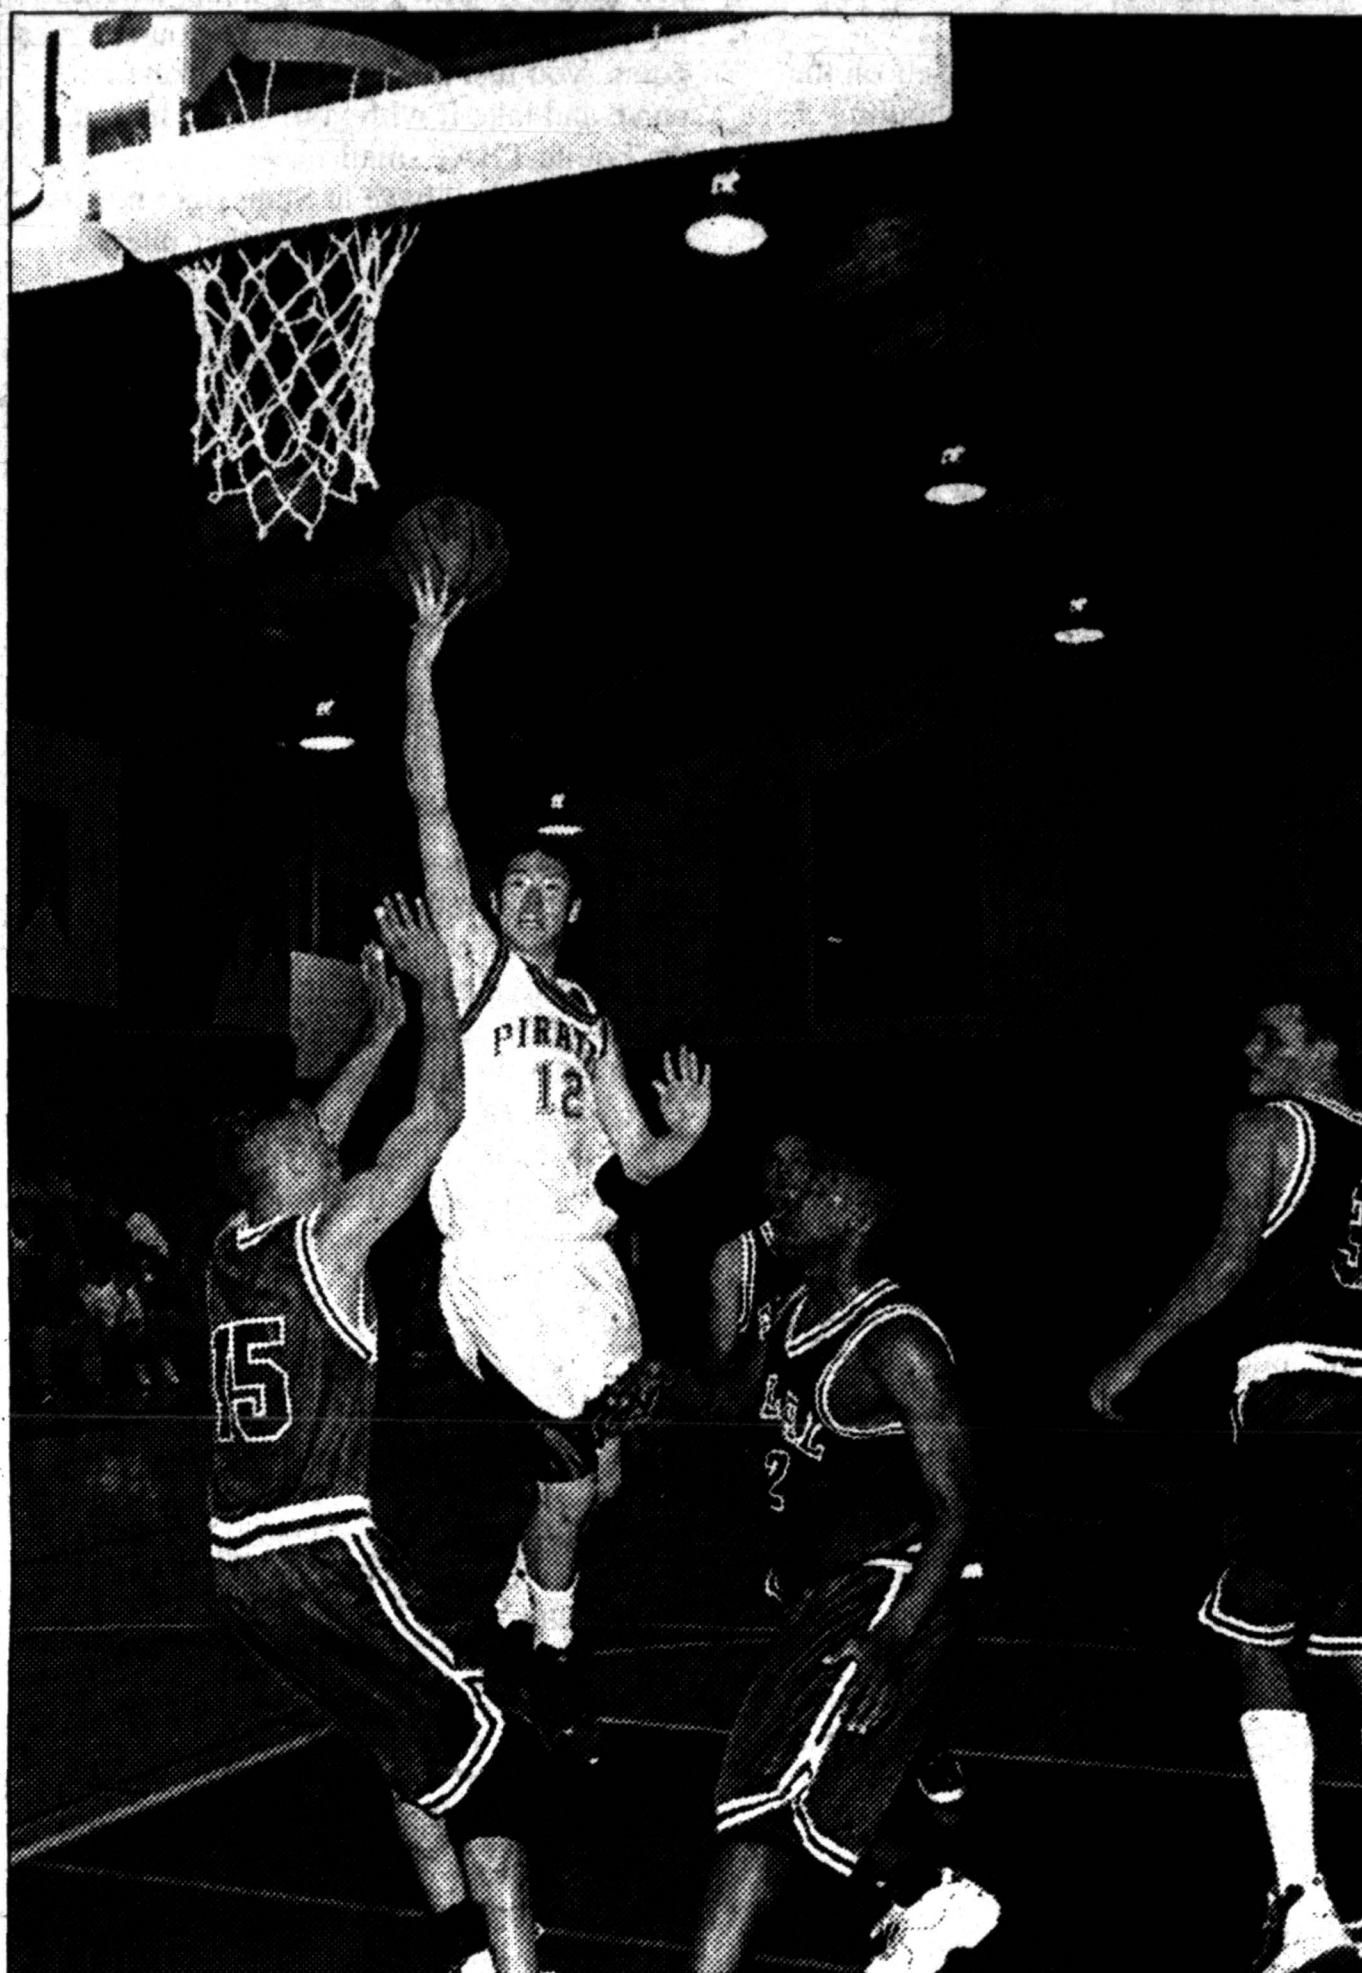

"All we can really do at this point is try

See CHS BASKETBALL page 17

Stevenson's Jason Ware (24) nearly drained this late fourth-quarter jumper with the game tied 60-60, but it circled around the rim and came back out. Alisal rebounded and went on to convert three free throws down the stretch for a 63-60 victory.

Four Alisal defenders watch in vain as the Pirates' Jeff Yeh (12) drives the key for a layup during last Friday evening's Mission Trail Athletic League contest in Pebble Beach. Tomorrow night, RLS hosts crosstown rival Carmel High at 7.

Late RLS goal stuns CHS field hockey team

By TREVOR FOGG and JOHN BENNER
Pine Cone Sports Correspondents

TEN SECONDS—that's how close the Carmel High School girls field hockey team came to its first non-loss of a season last Tuesday.

An incredible defensive effort maintained a 0-0 tie for the Padres until Robert Louis Stevenson's Daphne Descollonges managed to deliver a heartbreaking goal with just 10 seconds left in the contest. It was the second time Stevenson defeated Carmel this season, having accomplished the feat Dec. 10 by a 3-1 margin.

The nailbiter came on the heels of a 2-0 loss to Monterey High on Monday in which Carmel continued its offensive futility.

The season has been a long one, as Carmel failed to gain a win or a tie in league competition. Scores became increasingly respectable, however, as the Padre defense

Carmel High stops Stevenson, eyes MTAL crown

By SCOTT A. BROWN

CARMEL HIGH'S boys soccer team continued to blaze, winning important contests last Wednesday against Pacific Grove, Friday versus Robert Louis Stevenson and yesterday against York.

The victories came on the heels of another stellar week in which the Padres posted their first victories in school history over Gonzales and King City.

The Padres withstood a scrappy Pacific Grove team to manage a 2-1 win. Carmel's scoring efforts were led by Brendan Jones, who scored the game winner on a penalty kick, and Zak Freedman, who scored the other goal on an assist from Geronimo Volpini.

Against a considerably more talented Stevenson squad than Pacific Grove, Carmel stepped up its level of play to dominate most of the match while jumping out to a 3-0 first half lead.

Skip Powers kicked off the scoring on an assist from Volpini, while Jones recorded his eighth assist of the year setting up a Chip Powers goal.

Jones scored a goal of his own on a penalty shot. The offense was initiated by the outstanding defensive effort of John Pfeiffer, filling in at sweeper for the injured Jacob Kovacs.

The three wins improved Carmel's record to 11-3-2, keeping them in a second-place tie with Gonzales.

If King City, as expected, defeated Pacific Grove in an MTAL matchup Wednesday, the Mustangs would finish the season as the league champions.

stepped up as the season wore on.

Stevenson's victory came on the heels of a 0-0 tie Monday to York, who is tied with North Salinas for first place in the Mission Trail Athletic League.

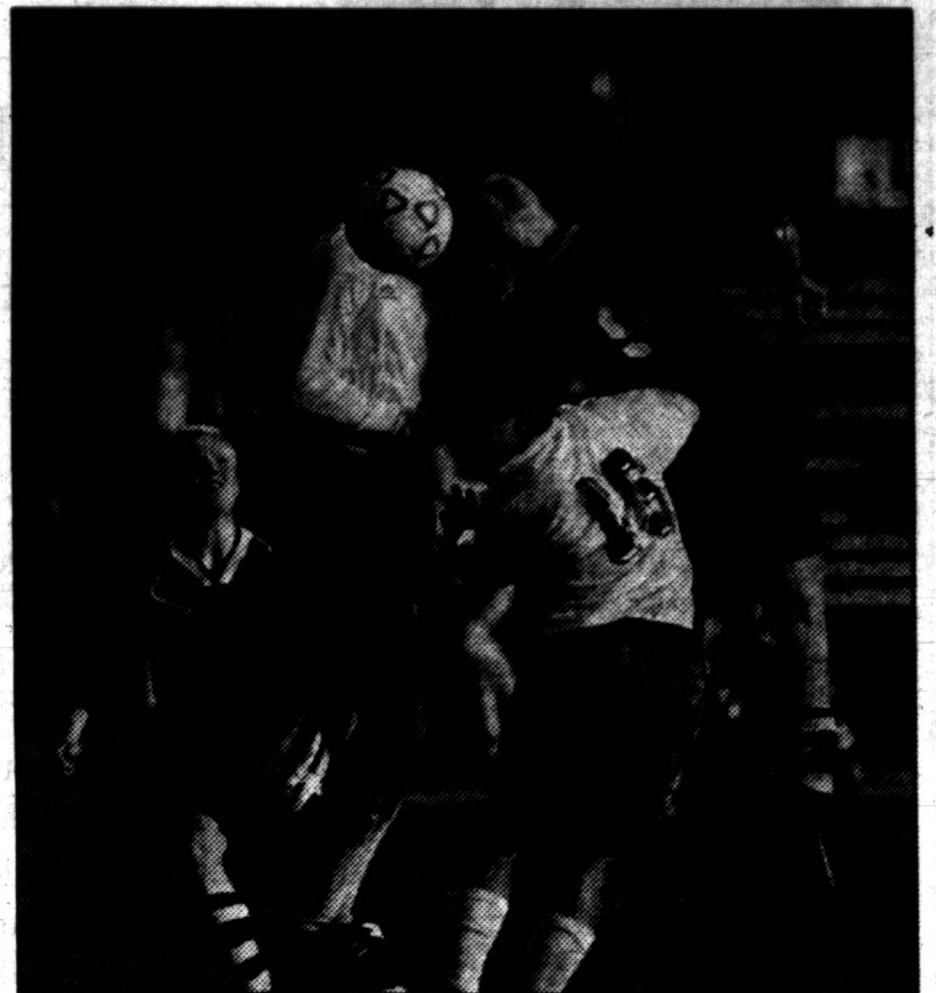

After the Carmel game, Stevenson faced off with Catalina Thursday in a battle for third place in the MTAL. In what Stevenson coach Margaret Jacobs described as "a close, well-played game," the Pirates battled to a 0-0 tie with the Cougars.

Notes: This is the last year field hockey will be played as a winter sport in the MTAL, as soggy fields and blustery conditions have made for low scoring contests (if the contests go on at all). The sport will move to the fall in the 1997-98 school year and will allow for division championships to be played.

The action was fast, furious and sometimes heady (see photo at right) when Carmel High and Stevenson met on the soccer field last Friday in Pebble Beach. Carmel, likely bound for the CCS playoffs, scored three early goals, and then held off a furious Pirate rally, 3-2.

BASKETBALL

to end the season with pride," said senior point guard Nick Cardinale. "We need to put together a few games where we play solid offense and defense for four quarters."

Tomorrow's 7 p.m. game has the Padres visiting 7-3 Robert Louis Stevenson. Stevenson, which is vying for a Central Coast Section playoff spot, narrowly defeated the Padres by one point when the two teams last met Jan. 22 at Carmel.

On Wednesday, the Padres' senior players will be recognized before their last home game of the season as when Palma comes to town. The season ends on Friday, the 21st against a tough PG squad.

Carmel dropped their games to Alisal 76-60 and Alvarez 60-59 last Wednesday and Friday, respectively. Cardinale had a career week with 19 points against Alisal and 21 points to go along with 10 assists against Alvarez.

Ben Cook scored 18 against Alisal and nine against Alvarez.

■ GIRLS BASKETBALL

In order to secure a Central Coast Section playoff spot, it looks as if the Padres must continue to play .500 ball. With a 6-6 record and three Mission Trail Athletic League games left, they don't have much breathing room. Carmel must knock off Pacific Grove, and then either Stevenson or Notre Dame.

Carmel will host 8-3 Stevenson Friday night at 6:45 p.m. The team then travels to Notre Dame, also 8-3, Wednesday night at 6:45 p.m.

The Padres were knocked off by Santa Catalina Tuesday and Stevenson Thursday, but they quickly rebounded to topple Alvarez Monday 45-35. Sophomores Michelle Gaudoin and Michelle O'Campo, along with senior Kim Dickerhoof each contributed ten points to a winning effort. Alvarez was held to just three points in the fourth quarter.

Padre girls heading off to CCS battle

By TREVOR FOGG
Pine Cone Sports Correspondent

IT'S OFFICIAL: the future of the Carmel High School girls varsity soccer team has Central Coast Section playoffs written all over it. With two wins and a tie this past week, the Padres extended their unbeaten streak to nine games and improved their record to 11-3-2.

The Padres clinched second-place in the Mission Trail Athletic League and a berth to the CCS playoffs with a decisive 5-0 victory over Gonzales Friday that was a makeup from a rain-out Jan. 23. Carmel's Sarah Coombe and Andrea Dalessio scored two goals apiece, while Christine Burns notched the other Padre score. Fallon Hookailo provided two assists while Chamise Morgenrath, Nina Hendricks and Kersten Wehde each contributed one.

Prior to the Gonzales game, Carmel also managed to oust Pacific Grove 2-1 Tuesday as well as tie Robert Louis Stevenson 2-2 Thursday.

Against Pacific Grove, the Padres got early first half scores from Marisol Valdez and Natalie Johnson. Two goals were all they needed as Johnson and Nicki Gillette stepped up with defensive pressure.

Against Stevenson, Coombe, in her first game after a week off with a pulled leg muscle, scored early to put Carmel ahead. The Pirates managed to tie the score up, however, just before halftime.

In the second half, the Padres controlled the ball on the offensive end, resulting in a score by Dalessio late in the half. The lead did not last long, as the Pirates brought the ball right back up the field and tallied a score before the final buzzer.

No ON MEASURE A

Let state clarify our water problem before we impose self-limits

COMMON SENSE seems to pervade the key provisions of Measure A, the all-mail ballot that will be tabulated March 4.

The fundamental points of departure on which the POWR (Protect Our Water Resources) legislation is based are all understandable. The measure calls for:

■ The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) board to halt further water distributions to the County of Monterey and its cities as long as the state-declared water shortage continues.

■ The water district to honor the overwhelming defeat of the New Los Padres Dam in November 1995 by assuring the dam permits would not be transferred to the California-American Water Co. without another vote.

(In November, Cal-Am announced its intention to pursue the same 282-foot-tall dam and 24,000 acre-foot reservoir on the Carmel River. The project would be different only in that Cal-Am would not seek any of the dam's water yield for new development.)

■ All new water supply proposals of more than $1 million to go to the voters for approval.

The arguments seem sound on the surface: Don't write checks when your bank account is empty. Uphold the popular will. Consult the people as you move through the process of finding water supplies.

But in the subtle business of water management and water politics, there are many facts that complicate this pure, uncluttered picture. In addition, with the state having put the area on a quasi-probation status two years ago, we should not be eager to further constrain our local decision-making process.

Water everywhere, none to give away

For starters, there is practically no water to allocate and the situation is unlikely to change anytime soon. We could insist the water board not budge even on the smallest of requests, but that wouldn't change the overall picture.

A little background is in order. In June 1995, the State Water Resources Control Board determined that Cal-Am's pumping of the Carmel River was destroying that "public trust resource" and would not be able legally to continue extracting about 69 percent of its river supply.

At present, Cal-Am is nearing the end of its two-year conservation order (obligatory 20-percent production cutbacks). The order was the state board's interim corrective measure while Cal-Am studied an array of projects to solve its deficit.

Apart from a small amount of water that might be taken from Seaside's underground system, all new water sources developed by Cal-Am, according to the state board's 1995 directive, would have to be directed toward making up the deficit.

It appears as though Measure A would preclude the water district from allocating even newly available recycled water, such as the 150-acre-foot distribution proposal made possible by the three-year-old

Within the existing shell

Dear Editor:

It was positive to read that Mayor White and the Carmel City Council are going to review Sunset Center plans with a commitment to hearing more from the preservation/rehabilitation voices in the village.

There is community-wide consensus that many improvements are long overdue at Sunset Center: sight lines, opening up of the proscenium arch, seismic considerations, dressing rooms, bathrooms and acoustics. I feel all the necessary rehabilitation needs can be accomplished within the existing shell of the building.

All but large-scale music events need more volume space than we have today. There are many, including myself, that believe the present sound at Sunset is quite good. Modern technology can significantly improve the sound, without tearing down the building as presently proposed by BOOR/A mitigated.

Leave the shell of the building as it has majestically stood for many years, a symbol of what is culturally important to Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Howard Brunn, Carmel

Riding into the Sunset

Dear Editor:

The last Carmel City Council meeting (Feb. 4) was certainly a historic one.

The vote was unanimous to start procedures to renovate Sunset Center. The plan chosen was the correct one, even though I know others disagree. However, now that the decision is made, I would urge all of us to get behind the choice made and make it into the very best addition possible to our community.

To this end it will take the input, the work, time and most of all, the enthusiasm of the entire community. There will be many more meetings on design, landscaping, materials and much more.

Come to these meetings and speak up. Contribute your ideas and desires, always with the intent to go forward with the chosen plan.

With all of us working toward the ultimate goal of the BOOR/A-mitigated plan, it will become reality.

So, get on the train, let's party, have fun, and build something we and generations to come can be proud of.

Noel Van Bibber, Carmel

Bag that idea

Dear Editor:

Great idea, transporting surplus fresh water from Washington to California in plastic bags 50 feet in diameter and 500 feet long, floating in the ocean, in strings of 60 bags tied end to end, and presumably towed by a fleet of tugboats. ("Inventor's answer to Peninsula water shortage: Bag it," Pine Cone, Jan. 30).

However, having seen a few Pacific storms during a couple years on a battleship, I think those 60 bags, each one almost as long as my old battleship, might have a tendency to separate at the "connection zippers" and wash ashore on some beach where there wasn't any water shortage.

If the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District is really serious about transporting water from Washington, I would suggest a submerged offshore pipeline anchored far enough below the surface to avoid surface and tidal turbulence.

Booster pumps, also below the surface, would keep the water moving southward. In effect, this would be similar to an over-land pipeline, except that it wouldn't have to contend with nuisances like hills, legal problems, crossing highways, freezing in blizzards, etc.

I think it would be cheaper, however, to just load a lot of non-essential volunteers on buses, and move them to places where fresh water is plentiful.

Mel Vercoe, Marina

P.S. Your article didn't mention that Terry Spragg told the water board that 60 bags would be tied end to end for each trip, which would make a string of bags almost six miles long.

Send a clear message

Dear Editor:

All one needs to do is listen to the voters. There is a clear record, trend and even a mandate. Residents of the Monterey Peninsula have made it clear: No more growth!

However, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Board continues to thwart the will of the people.

And Cal-Am Water Co. now says it wants to build the exact same dam the voters turned down in November 1996. Cal-Am calls it a "No-Growth Dam." What an insult to our intelligence.

Well, all is not lost. Up until March 4, registered voters of the water district will have an opportunity to vote on Measure A, which says: The water board cannot allocate water for new construction until we have a reliable and legal drought reserve for existing users. Measure A also states that the permits for the dam, that the taxpayers paid for, cannot be transferred to Cal-Am or any other agency.

Even though Measure A seems like common sense to most of us, when 6,000 POWR initiative signatures were presented to the MPWMD, it failed to make the initiative law at that time. Instead, the water board chose to spend thousands more tax dollars on a mail-out ballot.

In Measure A we have an opportunity to further demonstrate the will of the people. When you receive your ballot in the mail, mark yes and send it in. This is your chance to let MPWMD know, again, no more growth!

Pebble Beach Reclamation Project.

Over the past several months, attempts were made by certain water board members to allocate this recycled water as well as water from drought-reserve accounts, but the majority of the seven-member board wouldn't approve these efforts.

When she was MPWMD chairwoman last year, Darlene Burkleo was probably accurate to characterize the 150 acre-feet as "the last water we may allocate for a long, long time."

Mayors and other city officials were eager to divide up this embarrassingly small amount of water — enough for each jurisdiction to allow a few new homes, a couple of dozen residential remodels and assorted commercial expansions. Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula had hoped, and still hopes, for about 18 acre-feet to put in a cancer ward and other improvements slated for this year. Each of the jurisdictions was to pitch in two acre-feet.

As for the big projects where significant growth is possible, such as on Rancho San Carlos, just south of Carmel Valley, the water is already available in underground wells.

While debate, discussion and planning continues over how to solve the fundamental problem outlined by the state, we do not see the compelling need to stop any chance of meeting modest municipal needs, which may not be filled with or without Measure A.

Let us not forget that the state has the power to act with such sweeping authority that, in comparison, the provisions of Measure A could seem minor indeed.

Profound questions continue to surround the dam. Encumbering the permits (which cost the MPWMD about $10 million to secure over a period of years) will not stop Cal-Am from seeking re-issuance or pursuing its own permits, thus doubling expenses for the taxpayer/rate payer.

Because only some kind of dam can make up the 10,730 acre-foot deficit outlined by the state, a compromise solution may eventually be needed. And, if it is serious about stopping the environmental damage to the river, the state may step in and make it happen, whether directly or indirectly, whether with or without voter consent.

The permits and accompanying environmental data are a public asset that should not go down the drain. Sometime down the road, they may be useful either as complete documents or as partial documents that need supplementation.

Nor do we believe constantly returning to the voters for every water supply proposal is the smartest approach.

The MPWMD directors were elected in districts to represent us; so let them do so.

It was appropriate that the $100 million-plus dam was put to the ballot. Informed citizens can attend board hearings and make their feelings known about the merits and demerits of desal facilities, wells, cisterns, underground transfers and other matters.

When time is of the essence, unneeded obstacles are not welcome. The area's biggest problem is not a lack of constraints on the water board, but a shortage of information coming from the state board.

Is the state board satisfied with Cal-Am's search for alternatives apart from the dam? Can the state board directly or indirectly mandate that this area construct a dam? Will there be any leniency on the 10,730 acre-foot number?

Presumably, some answers about the seriousness of the state board's directive will be forthcoming on Oct. 1, when Cal-Am's two-year interim conservation period ends and a new water year begins.

We urge a no vote on Measure A to help preserve what few options and choices we have left in a dire situation. Let us not forget that the state has the power to act with such sweeping authority that, in comparison, the provisions of Measure A could seem minor indeed.

A SPECIAL MESSAGE TO OUR PATIENTS WHO SMOKE

Starting in March, smoking will not be allowed anywhere inside or outside of Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. This fine-tuning of our previous smoke-free policy means that patients may no longer smoke in their rooms even if they have what used to be known as a "compassionate exception order" from their physicians.

We changed our policy because non-smoking patients and employees complained about the previous policy, which allowed smoking in certain cases. And as a facility concerned with promoting health ... your health ... we felt we should no longer allow smoking on the premises.

This has the greatest impact on the 10 to 15 percent of our patients who smoke. If you are in this group and know you're going to be admitted to Community Hospital, talk to your doctor. Plan for ways you can reduce your discomfort, such as nicotine gum or patches. Better yet, use this opportunity to quit. Community Hospital has a variety of resources, from classes taught by ex-smokers to a free stop-smoking support group. For information, call the Comprehensive Cancer Center hotline at 625-4753. You'll be glad you did.

Mandate for failure

Dear Editor:

For 30 years, the Carmel City Council has enthusiastically supported my efforts first to protect — and when that failed, to restore — the Carmel River.

I was dismayed to find the name of Councilwoman Barbara Livingston among the signatures of politicians who apparently believe that the Carmel River can be restored by an ordinance. The POWR rebuttal on the ballot states that: "...Measure A will mandate that protection and restoration of the Carmel River basin SHALL CONTINUE!"

The keystone of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District's prior effort to "restore" the river was the effort to return the flows to the river that occurred before 1959. That effort was stymied by the 1995 election in which a majority of those who voted rejected the proposed funding for the New Los Padres Dam.

There is nothing in Measure A that proposes a substitute method for restoring flows!

It is a cruel deception on the part of those who wrote Measure A and those who publicly support it to assert that mere words in an ordinance and not PROJECTS can ever restore the river!

No "mandate" that does not restore flows has any meaning. Measure A, if approved, is far more likely to obstruct real restoration than to promote it.

Many members of the POWR committee and their supporters don't even know they're not being truthful. They are simply ignorant of the facts of what the river was, the meaning of restore, or the meaning of "river" in the broadest sense, encompassing both riverine and riparian ecology.

The American Heritage Dictionary definition of restore is: "To bring back to an original condition."

The meaning of "restoration" is: "The act of making new or as if new again."

Newcomers who have not lived here as long as I or others who grew up here can not be faulted for having no basis to remember what the river was (and could be again).

There was a time in days gone by when the river ran through the summer or, in very dry years, ran underground from pool to pool. Children swam the summer through.

What I still want to know, however, is just how Measure A is going to "restore" by mere mandates and words.

Ed Lee, Carmel

(Editor's Note: The letter writer is a former director with the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.)

Running on empty

Dear Editor:

We live in this other Eden, the Monterey Peninsula, with days like diamonds and beauty everywhere.

There is one thing that can spoil it: overpopulation.

Fortunately, we don't have the water to support the numbers of people that would build until there is no more land. Imagine that ... the Monterey Peninsula without open spaces, scenic vistas, pastoral views.

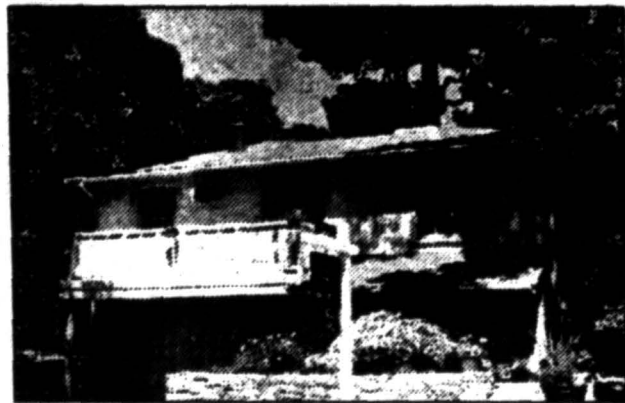

There is a saying: "the land does not grow." Neither does the water. Only the census.

I am voting for Measure A because it honestly addresses the truth: We don't have the water for the growth.

■ Clint's star still shines, even while he has made some concessions to age

By PAUL WOLF

THERE ARE many cute, slightly self-conscious lines that pepper the dialogue of Absolute Power, Clint Eastwood's well-crafted new thriller.

"I've gotta get my pacemaker checked," mutters veteran cat burglar Luther Whitney.

"You and I are too old to B.S. each other."

"If I could climb down a building on a rope, I would be the star of my AARP (American Association of Retired Persons) meetings."

As for this last line, it is uttered by the film's hero as he tells a lie to an interrogating detective, played by Ed Harris.

Indeed, by movie's end, our hero has climbed down the side of a building on a rope. He also has outrun armed villains, dodged bullets, snuffed out a bad guy, assumed myriad disguises and made speeding getaways.

These scenarios seem to fit the bill for an Eastwood persona, but something is observably different in almost every scene — cheerfully different sometimes; painfully different at other times.

Psychic reveals three rules for finding soul mate

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

ARE YOU YEARNING for a soul mate this Valentine's Day? Is your search for Mr. or Ms. Right going nowhere? If so, take heart — no pun intended — because psychic Pat McAnaney can advise you on how to go about it successfully.

Seated in his sunny studio in Carmel Valley where he conducts personal and business consultations, McAnaney, now in his early 40s, is a person at home in his own skin. He is, at the same time, relaxed and poised, intense and focused, sincere and articulate. It is not difficult to feel at ease with him as he answers questions about his psychic gifts.

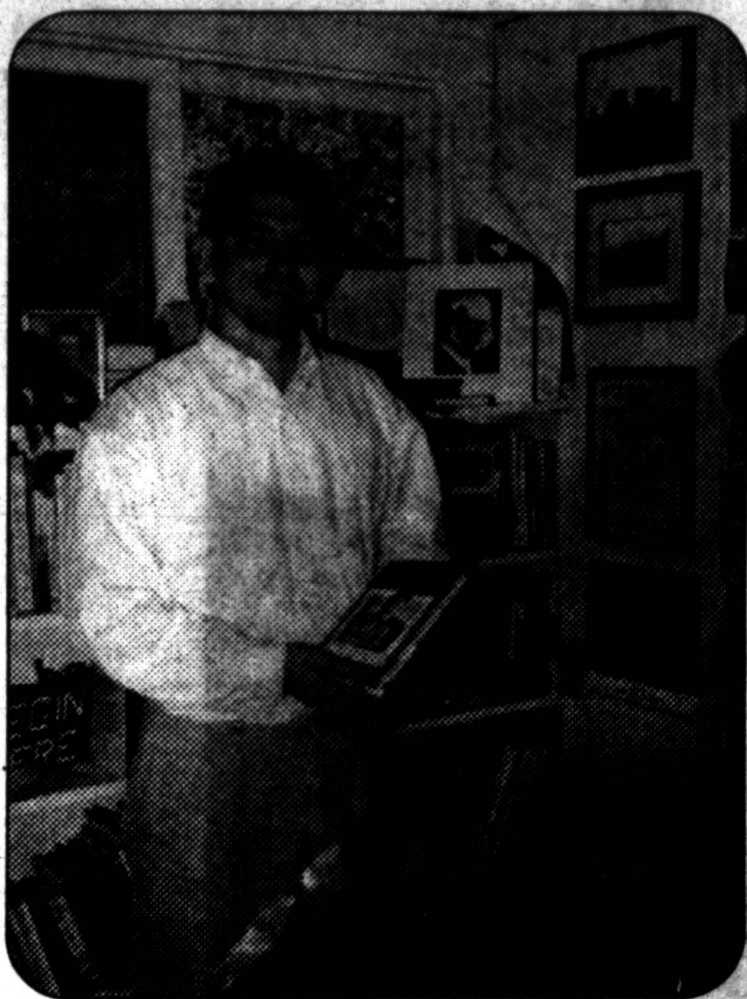

McAnaney reached locals for many years through his radio show, "The Human Potential Hour," formerly on public radio station KAZU, his newspaper column of questions and answers printed in various alternative newspapers, and his book, "Dear Psychic," published by Victory Press of Monterey. He has also appeared on hundreds of local and national radio and television shows.

Accurate psychic responses

Actual on-the-air advice by McAnaney lead a caller to her child whom she had given up for adoption 20 years previously; located a missing child in another state within minutes of receiving a call from the mother; and helped a sheriff track down a rapist, to name only a few of his accurate psychic responses.

These days McAnaney travels a great deal, consulting with clients and fulfilling speaking engagements in such diverse places as Colorado, New York, Canada, Belgium, England, Wales and Switzerland. To date he has held more than 8,000 one-on-one counseling sessions.

All this is by way of establishing McAnaney's credentials as a respected, acknowledged psychic. What we really wanted to learn for our readers as St. Valentine's Day approaches is how to meet one's soul mate.

McAnaney has been happily married to his soul mate, Kate, for many years. He offers three rules to be followed in the soul mate search:

First, he advises, "Work on your perfect person wish list until you have developed a clear idea of what you want in a life partner. Second, be willing to match your own standards. That is, offer exactly the same qualities to the person with whom you wish to spend the rest of your life. And third, love yourself."

McAnaney believes that if you follow these three rules you will bring a soul mate into your life.

Further, McAnaney states unequivocally, "Until you can be happy with yourself while alone, you are unlikely to bring a workable partner into your life."

He is quick to point out that "A true soul mate shows up when you no longer require rescuing. The best long-term relationships are never based on neediness."

But what if a person is ready to commit to marriage but one's partner isn't?

Light a fire

"Light a fire under your partner," McAnaney advises. "If it's a right relationship, there's nothing you can do to make it less right."

And if you feel your relationship is not going to last, how do you determine how and when to break it off?

"You have to determine how this person makes you feel about yourself," McAnaney says, "and the moment you realize that you don't feel good about yourself, that's the time to break it off."

McAnaney has some heartening words for those who ask: Have past relationships just been a waste of precious time? His answer is, "In the quest for a soul mate, there are often 'steppingstone' relationships along the way, people who help you define more clearly what you want in a partner. You've already done the hardest part of that relationship research. Your experiences have helped you to create a very clear picture of what you don't want in a partner!"

For those who want to read more of this sincere psychic's words and learn more of his background and perhaps allay feelings of skepticism, copies of his 1993 "Dear Psychic" are available at The Pilgrim's Way and The Thunderbird book stores in Carmel.

In "Dear Psychic," McAnaney explains the psychic world in straightforward, easy-to-follow manner.

♥ SAINT VALENTINE ♥ AND THE ARMED CUPID

SAINT VALENTINE'S DAY is one of our oldest days of celebration. That it survives is a tribute to enduring love.

There are two figures represented on this day of loving proclamation: One a guy, a Christian guy ... Valentine; one a god, a Roman god ... Amor.

The whole thing actually started out way back in the third century A.D. when the Roman Emperor Claudius II forbade young men to marry. His enlightened thinking was that single men made better warriors than married men. But the young men wanted to marry anyway, and a Christian priest named Valentine agreed to wed couples in secret despite the Emperor's decree.

Reflections
By Patrick Whitehurst

Another story relating to the traditions of St. Valentine's day has it that Valentine was such a nice guy that children loved him, and that when he was imprisoned for not accepting the Roman gods and violating Roman Law, the children began writing him loving letters and tossing their notes through the bars of his cell. Thus, the first Valentine cards.

Valentine refused to repent to his Roman captors and was executed on Feb. 14, 270 A.D. — a violent ending for the man who embodies love.

In 486, Pope Gelasius recognized Valentine as a Christian martyr, sainted him, and recorded Feb. 14 as Saint Valentine's Day.

Poor martyred Valentine. Sentenced to death for refusing to accept Roman Religion ... the same religion whose god, Amor, better known as Cupid, now represents St. Valentine's Day as much as the saint.

Strange that a Roman deity is used on a Christian holiday and that a Christian is honored by a Roman god. But the whole evolution of Cupid is a strange story.

Originally Amor (Cupid), the son of Venus, was depicted as a handsome, athletic, virile young man, but as the Roman Empire shrank, so did Cupid. In about 300 A.D. a wild-eyed guy with a piece of rock and some stone chisels created the fat little toddler with the stubby wings that we see today on our 32-cent postage stamps.

But bless his cherubic little heart, his golden-tipped arrows still pierce our hearts while Saint Valentine's benediction still leads us to the altar.

VALENTINE

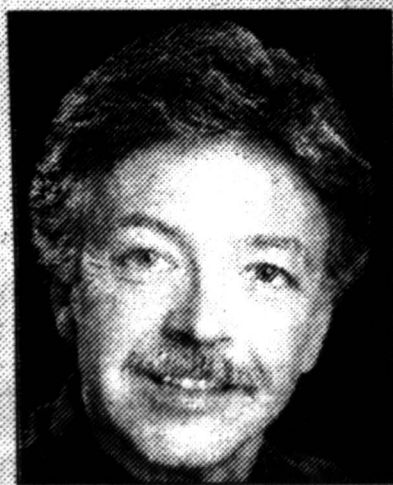

*I have heard the pensive essays of your heart
With emotions of soft delight,
And heard Love's sighing zephyrs come and depart
Like sweet whispering Angels in the night.*

CLINT EASTWOOD: MYTH IN THE MIDST OF REINVENTION

CONTINUES FROM THE COVER

Enter "The New Eastwood" — vulnerable, filled with self-doubt, overly conscious of his age, and occasionally willing to express inner feelings. Eastwood has remained a huge box office draw while reinventing himself and making more and more concessions to age. One thing is clear, there is no turning back.

Breakthrough tears

In Wolfgang Petersen's 1993 thriller, "In the Line of Fire," it was a breakthrough to see the Eastwood character — an aging secret service agent, still blaming himself for JFK's death — shedding tears over his sense of guilt.

In 1995, the Eastwood-directed "Bridges of Madison County" was a veritable tear-jerker compared to anything the star had been involved with either as actor or director. Ironically, it was Eastwood's basic quality of restraint that kept the movie from going over the top. Many people reported they liked the movie better than the book, high praise for a literary adaptation.

What's going on here? Is Eastwood putting aside the Men of Steel roles to remain believable in the middle of his sixth decade? Or are we witnessing an artist's natural growth and evolution? The answer may be yes to both questions.

Eastwood's films since the Oscar-winning "Unforgiven" (1992) have balanced the customary true grit with a newer, softer side. During the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s, we saw hints of Eastwood's ability to portray subtle emotions. An outstanding departure was the nearly overlooked "Bronco Billy" (1980), in which Eastwood plays a cowboy, part real, part impostor, fleeing a society to which he is ill-suited.

The durability of the Eastwood myth — constant since "A Fistful of Dollars," his first international smash (1964) — has always been based on a predictable stolidness shaken only fitfully by violence. "Absolute Power" is not the story of a pacifist.

Now Eastwood has modified the myth. True, The New Eastwood doesn't shy away from violence, but it is carried out in self-defense or in the defense of others.

Clint Eastwood (right) directs co-star Gene Hackman in his newest effort, "Absolute Power," released by Castle Rock Entertainment.

(Says Whitney in "Absolute Power": "When you went after my little girl, that was entirely unacceptable.") And if The New Eastwood breaks the law, guilt tends to catch up with him eventually. (Whitney returns the jewels after the crime scene was upgraded to a murder scene.)

And so the new emotional range is accompanied by a greater moral sense. A frightening moral relativism was at the heart of the Eastwood mystique associated with the Spaghetti Westerns and the Dirty Harry series, in which Eastwood played both sides against the middle or improvised morality based on the need of the moment.

Should his box office appeal continue in the years to come, it will only prove that the Eastwood Myth was more pliable than anyone might have believed.

In films like "Rear Window" (1954) and "Anatomy of a Murder" (1959), Jimmy Stewart seemed to grow as an actor by exchanging idealism for a hardened, world-weary demeanor. If the comparison is valid, Eastwood's movement has been in the opposite direction.

Here's a prediction: He will never again be able to play lethal types. "Bridges" was a watershed, proving once and for all that Eastwood could be more than a screen presence, but a true character actor. His Robert Kincaid is an idealistic, gentle protagonist without a hint of the usual menace.

Domestic bliss

Happily settled in with his new wife, local news anchor Dina Ruiz, and their infant daughter, Morgan, Eastwood may hold up the benevolent, reflective Kincaid as a role model of sorts. Published feature stories suggest that Eastwood, Carmel's most famous resident, intends to enjoy domestic tranquility and slow down his steady stream of projects. We will see if that turns out to be true.

"Absolute Power" won't and shouldn't be considered Eastwood's swan song. Despite rock solid direction and a variety of good performances, it is a comparatively minor film — perhaps even a diversion — in the company of such quiet landmarks as "Unforgiven" and "Bridges of Madison County."

In 1997, Eastwood seems to have much to look forward to both personally and professionally. As art increasingly imitates life for this screen icon, Eastwood has learned to believe what Kincaid told Meryl Streep's Francesca — change can be comforting when you realize you can always rely on it.

The passing of the decades has taught Eastwood that he may not have absolute power, but he does have absolute durability.

Classical Music in Review

Golden Bough: Notably viable concertgoing venue

IS IT A SIGN of the times? With plans to demolish and rebuild Sunset Theater looming ever closer to approval, new venues for classical music will need to be found during the lengthy construction period. Sunday afternoon, Jan. 26, the Monterey County Symphony presented the second concert in what it calls its "Chamber, Ensemble and Recital Series."

And this concert was not presented in the Mayflower Church in Pacific Grove as so many in this series have been before, but rather in the Golden Bough Theater in Carmel.

For many this was their first opportunity to hear classical music at the Golden Bough, and it has to be said that it worked well. The acoustics and the sight lines (two of the most frequently criticized beautiful polish and refinement heard when the Arioso Wind Octet played the same Mozart Serenade two weeks previously for the Mozart Society at the Church of Religious Science in Monterey.

In the Dvorak Serenade in D Minor, Op. 44, the oboes in the first movement were at times squeaky and squawky, and at times heavenly and beautiful. In the Minuetto second movement, Terry Richards and Marc Wahrhaftig had a stunning horn duo, and in the Finale everything came together to provide an exciting conclusion.

The theater was only half full on this beautiful, sunny Sunday afternoon, but, of course, this event was competing with the AT&T golf tournament, and that is stiff competition indeed.

The next concert in this series will be a Trio Recital on March 19 featuring the Yablonsky Family performing Schubert's Trio in B-flat Major and the Shostakovich Trio No. 2.

Ensemble charms packed house

COMPETING WITH all the social festivities of the AT&T, Ensemble Monterey presented a concert Jan. 25 at Monterey Peninsula College of music for wind instruments under the direction of John Anderson.

Was anybody there? You'd better believe it — the place was packed. You have to admire someone with Anderson's vision and tenacity, for he has created a vehicle for intimate ensemble music and an audience for it as well. Featuring musicians from the Monterey Peninsula, and the evening's featured guest artists, the Surf City Brass Quintet, there was something of interest for everyone.

On the program was Stravinsky's Octet for Wind Instruments, Kurt Weill's Little Threepenny Music, Andre Previn's Four Outings for Brass Quintet and three ragtime selections by Scott Joplin arranged for wind ensemble.

We don't hear a lot of Stravinsky these days, and a lot of contemporary music has passed over the dam since his death 26 years ago. However, the performance we heard at MPC, prefaced, incidentally, by some excellent verbal program notes from Anderson and brief musical examples by the ensemble, demonstrated how vital this music is today. Although the ensemble was occasionally ragged, the spirit of the music came shining through.

Hearing the instrumental suite of selections from Weill's Threepenny Opera was like being in a time warp back to Germany's Weimar Republic of the 1920s. The familiar tunes, like "Mack the Knife" and "Polly's Song," evoked a charming nostalgia.

The Andre Previn Four Outings for Brass Quintet featured the Surf City Brass Quintet who gave us the most polished and vibrant playing of the evening. Full of exciting dynamic contact and propulsive rhythms, the group's performance was one of the highlights of the evening.

The program ended with a charming rendition of the three Scott Joplin songs. Once again charm was the password and the musicians gave us a splendid treat. Ensemble Monterey's next performance will be on Saturday, March 8, at the MPC Music Hall.

aspects of Sunset Theater) were very fine indeed. There was, however, a high-pitched whine from the ventilation or lighting system which was oddly dissonant during the Mozart Serenade in E-flat Major which opened the concert. After intermission I moved from the fifth row to the last row at the rear of the theater and could no longer hear the distracting whine.

MINGUS AMUNGUS STARS AT VALENTINE'S DAY FUNDRAISER

ALISTAIR (ALI) MONROE, manager of the San Francisco "new jazz" group Mingus Amungus, is a dedicated young man appreciative of his roots. A former resident of Carmel, Ali Monroe attended school at Carmel River, Carmel Middle and Carmel High schools where he excelled in sports. His older brother, Thyme Lewis, is a successful actor in Los Angeles and his mother, well known photographer Heidi McGurkin, still resides in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

This Friday (Valentine's Day), Monroe (who is also founder and director of the North Beach Jazz Festival) has booked the entire 15-piece ensemble of Mingus Amungus in a fundraiser/concert to be held at Chevy's Mexican Restaurant at the Crossroads in Carmel. Thanks to recent efforts by restaurant manager Chris Macdevitt and promoter Gary Hamada of Imagine Enterprises, Chevy's will begin promoting live music on a semi-regular basis. According to Hamada, "This will not be a venue for top 40 groups. We want to showcase original bands."

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

Monroe, who first met Mingus Amungus bassist and band leader Miles Perkins while working at a cafe in North Beach in San Francisco, was enticed to manage the group for a number of reasons. "The band is comprised of totally dedicated musicians," Monroe explained over the phone from his San Francisco home. "The group also represents different generations of musicians ... which I found too good to be true." Keyboardist Muziki Roberson, "50 years young," is the elder of the group and brings a first-hand understanding of jazz, having played with the likes of Pete Escovedo, Sonny Simmons, Julian Priester and Woody Shaw.

Born at the Cafe du Nord in San Francisco as a tribute concert for Charles Mingus, the success of Mingus Amungus has exceeded the group's initial intent. Carrying the innovative Mingus philosophy into the '90s, founder Perkins and his all-star seven-piece band plays intricate Mingus compositions, infusing funk and a distinct San Francisco hip-hop flavor. The group combines diverse cultural influences and, as will be seen this Friday, includes up to 15 musicians, drummers, vocalists and dancers who together provide a rare glimpse of the richness of urban society.

A recent tour as the opening act for guitar legend Carlos Santana, major festival appearances and an upcoming scheduled tour of Cuba in April (where the group will perform with Los Van Van and Ireke), has Monroe and Perkins working overtime.

"All of the experiences that we have garnered ..." a recent press release stated. "Have prepped us for the respect and awareness that we have for others. To perform, educate and to be educated helps us to strive to better ourselves as a team of creative souls."

And as for Monroe, who will return to Carmel to attend the group's local gig, "Carmel is still like home to me. When you are a kid you take it for granted ... but now I realize what a beautiful and wonderful place Big Sur and Carmel really is."

Tickets for Friday's Mingus Amungus concert are available at Chevy's ($10 in advance or $15 at the door). Tropical/funk band Big Rain opens the concert at 7:30 p.m. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to Meals on Wheels. For more information call 626-0945.

Local featured band of the month: Unshakeable Race

An impressive double billing of Unshakeable Race and Lovers & Strangers will perform on Valentine's Day at Doc's Nightclub. Relatively new to the local music scene, Rob and Danyel London have imported the heart and soul of their "funky world groove" group, Unshakeable Race, from their home base in Eugene, Ore. to the less fertile musical environment of Monterey. The pair, regular fixtures at Thursday jam sessions at Whitey's Place, have in less than a year begun to capture the attention of local music fans.

A popular Pacific Northwest band with a successful CD release and accustomed to performing before large crowds, Unshakeable Race has only recently put together their "local" lineup. Joining bassist Rob and guitarist/vocalist Danyel London are Santa Cruz drummer Virdell Green, San Francisco keyboardist Dave "Hodge" Lodge, and dj/scratcher Ess Ibrahim. The group's sound is hard to categorize but is comprised of funky reggae rhythms and socially conscious lyrics and the danceable mix is fueled by the obvious chemistry working between the talented London pair.

The group plans to record a five-song CD and video "multi-media" package in San Francisco and will soon record a local cut for the Monterey Rock and Art Festival compilation CD.

In addition to Friday's gig, Rob and Danyel London perform with scratcher Ibrahim as "Unpluggable Race," Tuesdays at Whitey's Place and on Wednesdays at Viva Monterey. On Thursday nights they co-host the Whitey's jam session with guitarist Joseph Lucido and drummer Jason McIntosh.

Monterey Rock and Art Festival update

When the people at McGarrett's (that would be Brooke Lewis) get together with the people at 3 spirits gallery (Brad and Susan Mallery), innovative ideas are bound to surface. Beginning Feb. 22, and continuing on the third Friday of each month thereafter, the folks at 3 spirits will promote live music and art exhibits at the downstairs "clubroom" in the downtown Monterey night spot.

Long-time Monterey club owner Lewis calls McGarrett's the first club to go "multi-dimensional."

"We now have live music and a deejay upstairs, and live music and art downstairs as well," he explains. Rock 'n' roll groups who will appear on the Monterey Rock and Art Festival CD will perform live at McGarrett's beginning with 420 Express.

The CD is being recorded at the former Ice House Recording Studios which was recently purchased by Leslie Shil. According to Shil, the studio has been updated and a lot of their equipment upgraded. Its name has been changed to Cyber Sound Studios.

CD release party fetes Heather Secord

One project recently completed at the East Franklin Street recording studios will be celebrated at a CD release party at 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 22 at the Pacific Grove Art Center. Local singer/songwriter Heather Secord has for years specialized in the esoteric and her latest effort, Shine Along the Way, is no exception. The album is the culmination of three "on and off years" of writing and recording and varies from Native American Indian chanting to popular contemporary songs in the vein of the Indigo Girls.

Shil and Secord, who co-produced the CD, both give keyboardist Dave "Dasher" Kempton a great deal of credit for transforming the project. Guitarist Tom Ayres

■ Stephen L. Vagnini is a self-described music activist who resides in Marina. For more than 15 years Vagnini has promoted concerts, managed bands and covered the local music beat.

Jazz plays the Crossroads

Promoters Gil Wisdom and Alan Schultz of the KRML Jazz Store close out a busy month of tasty jazz performances Friday the 21st with a concert featuring Brazilian guitarist/composer Richard Peixoto. A native of Rio de Janeiro, Peixoto is a graduate of Berklee College of Music where he studied with guitarist Pat Metheny.

Moving to San Francisco to attend the San Francisco Conservatory, Peixoto has since performed with Flora Purim and Airto and is the leader and musical director of Motown/MoJazz recording artists Terra Sul. His compositions and guitar technique draw on his diverse background of jazz and classical training as well as his Brazilian background. On Friday, Peixoto will be joined by bassist Derrick Jones and drummer John Burr. Admission is $20 per person. Call 624-6432 for reservations.

Feature of the Week:

Giuliano's

Christopher Caul, chef/owner of Giuliano's in downtown Carmel, treats his restaurant as a work in progress. He has moved away from the concept of Giuliano's as a formal establishment where tuxedo-clad waiters discourse on costly wines.

The recently redecorated Giuliano's is more "Carmel casual," Caul maintains. He brings the same innovation to Giuliano's that garnered him the Critic's Choice Award from the New York Times and best new restaurant honor for two restaurants he operated in New York.

Giuliano's pleases diners with fresh pastas made fresh daily on the premises, mesquite-grilled meats and fish, Holland veal, New Zealand venison chops and other delights. Meals may conclude with gelato-style ice cream, chocolate bread pudding, apple tarts and such, all from the kitchens of Giuliano's.

"I was trained in the European style, but we've given the food a '90s feel," Caul explains. "I call it progressive European."

There are some 70 wines to sample from the list, and in fact, Giuliano's is a place that encourages sampling of appetizers, fine wines by the glass, and other a la carte pleasures.

"Casual dress is welcome," the chef/owner asserts. He is assisted by his wife, Catherine, who frequently greets guests. The restaurant has proved so successful, they are considering opening for lunch this summer. At present, Giuliano's is open nightly for dinner. It's located at Mission and Fifth. Call 622-0650.

Big Sur Heavy Metal

Artists, architects and art lovers alike turn to Big Sur Heavy Metal for original metal sculptures and architectural elements. Tim Bottonis is owner of the studio, which is located at 718 Redwood Ave. in Sand City.

Big Sur Heavy Metal translates designs into finished pieces for many leading architects and artists. The owner completes commissioned pieces of architectural and metal sculpture.

"I'll go into a home that needs a fireplace mantel, and will then design a piece that complements their decor. Some designs are abstract, while others are functional. The finished look depends on the taste of the client," Bottonis explains.

Big Sur Heavy Metal avoids metal casting, which is toxic. The emphasis is on steel and alloys that are hand cut, shaped and welded to fit the artist's conception. To learn more, call 393-0110.

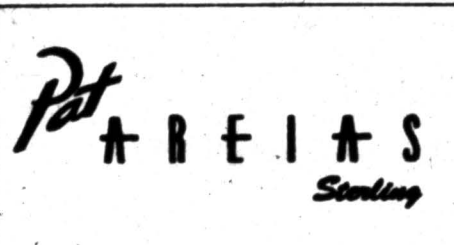

Pat Areias

Pat Areias Sterling, located on the south side of Lincoln just south of Ocean Avenue in Carmel, is the flagship store for this innovative designer of men's and women's accessories in silver.

The shop showcases her full line of custom jewelry, sterling silver belt buckles and belt straps.

What distinguishes her work is that while many jewelers carve their designs in a wax mold and have them mass produced in the hundreds, Pat Areias Sterling is fully hand fabricated by silver and leather master craftsmen. This Old World method of working silver creates designs that are astonishingly timeless, even contemporary.

Pat Areias Sterling is open 10:30 to 5:30 every day, until 7 p.m. in the summer. The shop is managed by Xaveria Sanchez, Pat's sister-in-law. Call 626-8668.

PUBLIC RECORDS BECOME MORE 'PUBLIC' IN INFORMATION AGE

WHEN YOU THINK of city and county services, police and fire protection and filling pot holes probably come into mind. But of course local government does much more.

California Trends

By Bradley Inman

For example, it controls mounds of real estate data and maps that are critical to the average real estate transaction. Tax liens, mortgage documents, property sales, building permits, demographic information, environmental quality reports, plot maps and property tax records are just part of the information that cities and counties must collect, analyze and distribute to lenders, Realtors and the public.

But how they do their job will soon be changing as technology and the Internet make information more accessible for those wired to the World Wide Web.

Public data is being put up on the Web at a furious pace, giving the public instant access to information that would otherwise require a trip downtown to city hall or to the county recorder's offices. Every week there seems to be a new announcement about local government records going up on the Web.

■ Next week, INPHO, Inc., a burgeoning home data information company from Boston, will begin publishing a national database of home and condominium prices on the Internet. The interactive database will include more than 20 million real estate records, giving consumers instant access to the information as they search for comparative home prices and other data about housing values.

■ Commonwealth Title, which sells title insurance policies, is another leader. The Commonwealth Web site allows searches of public records by homeowner name, street address, parcel number, and all sales by ZIP code or by comparable home sales in the neighborhood. Once a particular property is identified, the complete county tax assessor file is displayed and includes information such as the owner's name, address, sale price and date, square footage, number of bedrooms and baths, year built and lot size. The information is complete with a spiffy parcel map, which is scanned from public records.

■ EQE International, a seismic risk assessment firm, introduced an Internet service late last year that allows California homeowners to obtain a detailed analysis of their home's exact seismic risk before the next "big quake" simply by putting the address of their property into the computer. The information comes from federal, state and local government sources.

Without these sources, consumers have to wade through piles of public records in city or county offices to get such information or rely on a third party such as a real estate agent or lender, and that might take hours — if not days.

Oddly enough, local government is setting itself up to become less important in the information age. When private companies take the data public and push it onto the Web, who needs city hall?

Academics call it disintermediation, which is the idea of replacing the middle man with technology or some more efficient way of delivering the same set of services. ATM machines replace bank tellers,

WARMER TEMPERATURES CAUSE NEXT SEASON TO 'SPRING' UPON US

THE LACK of very low temperatures and the stretches of warm weather we've been having cause me to want to make the prediction of an early spring, which is certainly not that unusual for this area. Whether or not I'm correct in my guess, it would certainly be nice to be ready when the colder season ends and the season for planting begins.

Garden Variety

By Thomas Mickler

Sandy soils benefit from this because it helps the soil to retain moisture as well as adds nutrients needed for good plant growth and health. For clay soils the benefit is just the opposite, it allows for better drainage and at the same time allows the good nutrient value in clay soil to break down and become available to plants.

Soil preparation: Get planting beds ready by mixing in organic compost. Both sandy and clay soils benefit from this. Try breaking up soil to a depth of about two feet, then mixing in the organic material. If it's too difficult, try a depth of at least one foot.

Seasonal Planting: Finish planting bare-root stock, such as fruit trees and roses. Start planting spring bloomers; check nursery for what's available now. You can also directly sow hardy annuals, for example: cineraria, stock, snapdragon, tagetes, alyssum and some varieties of primrose and dianthus.

The ideal soil is a mixture of sand, clay and silt. This loamy soil is usually able to hold adequate moisture and contains the elements needed for a healthy garden.

If it is not possible to mix in organic compost, you could add an inch or two on the surface around your plants at least once a year. This will improve the condition of the soil also.

Seasonal Planting: Finish planting bare-root stock, such as fruit trees and roses. Start planting spring bloomers; check nursery for what's available now. You can also directly sow hardy annuals, for example: cineraria, stock, snapdragon, tagetes, alyssum and some varieties of primrose and dianthus.

For you vegetable growers, sow seed for peas, beets, carrots, lettuce and spinach. Plant summer bulbs, tubers or corms such as cannas, gladiolus, begonias, dahlias, crocosmia and hemerocallis, better known as the daylily.

Fertilization: Fertilize spring bulbs as they appear. A light fertilization (approximately one-half rate) should be given to lawns, ground covers and roses as they start to grow. If lawns are growing vigorously, and I've seen some that already are, then a normal application is fine.

An all-purpose fertilizer can be given to established trees, shrubs, vines and any newly planted bare-root or container stock, including berries and fruit trees. If you are growing cold-tolerant vegetables, you can give light fertilization to new seedlings, best done in the form of a liquid.

Seasonal Pruning and Other

Tasks: If you have not done so already, prune your roses before any new growth appears. Make sure your fruit and ornamental trees have been pruned and sprayed, if desired.

Lawns may need to be aerated and/or de-thatched.

Dig-up and divide crowded summer perennials, such as coreopsis, geranium, daylily, yarrow, shasta daisy, lavender and armeria. This procedure will allow you to increase your plantings, especially of the plants you like, without having to run to the nursery.

See GARDEN page 14R

Something else you might consider is trying to create a specific color scheme in your garden. One lady I worked for loved plants with blue flowers. This presented me with an ongoing challenge to find and plant these beloved plants.

Try Something Different: Many of us get into the routine of using the same plants from year to year. I think that some of the reasons are because we've found something that works. We also may know a lot about the growing habits of our "regulars." I encourage you to try something different this year. Go to the nursery, or get out a book and find something that looks strange or intriguing, or may be a little challenging in your yard and give it a try. And remember, the books don't have all the answers. I've seen plants flourish in areas where "the books" say they won't do well.

Something else you might consider is trying to create a specific color scheme in your garden. One lady I worked for loved plants with blue flowers. This presented me with an ongoing challenge to find and plant these beloved plants.

This challenge turned into a reward. Not only did I learn of many new plants and how they grew, but I got to enjoy the yard each time I went to care for it.

Thomas Mickler, who moved to the Peninsula in the summer of 1982, fell in love with the area's beauty and the mild climate. He has been in the gardening and landscaping profession for more than a decade. He considers it a privilege that he can make his living doing what he loves.

His column appears every other week in the real estate / home & garden section of The Pine Cone.

So, take the challenge and let me know if it was worth the effort. Until next time, Happy Planting!

Ripe for disintermediation

Local government data chummers are ripe for disintermediation. They often use the most arcane technology and deliver it inefficiently — paper and microfiche being the most common.

Indeed, they can still be a stumbling block in the process of making information more accessible.

Last month, the City of Philadelphia was sued by land title officials because it takes as long as six months or more to process standard real estate documents such as titles, liens and actual sales transactions. The city promises a new computer system will help, but in the meantime, real estate agents, lenders, title officials and the public must live with ridiculous delays.

This sort of inefficiency has a chain reaction.

Take appraisals, which are being automated so that a lender or home buyer can instantly get an assessment of a property's value from the computer desktop. But appraisals, which are essential to mortgage approvals, are only as good as the comparable home price data on which they are based. And for now, local government still keeps some control over that and other real estate information.

But that is changing.

Camille May of Carmel has the actor/director sign a Clint Eastwood biography at the premiere showing of Eastwood's film, 'Absolute Power.' The gala took place at the Galaxy Six Cinemas in Monterey last Thursday.

Attending the premiere of Clint Eastwood's 'Absolute Power' were Dennis and Karen LeVett, Ron Abba and Maggie Eastwood.

Eastwood's 'Absolute Power' gala premiere benefits youth charities

WELCOME TO Hollywood North!

Hollywood South in Los Angeles has the Pantages Theatre where many world premieres are held, but right here we have actor-director and former Carmel mayor Clint Eastwood, whose newest film, "Absolute Power" premiered Feb. 6 at the local Galaxy Six Cinemas. And what a turnout!

An adoring fan handed Eastwood a white carnation. Call it "Flower Power." For power is what you think of when you come close to the charismatic Eastwood, who conveys friendliness to everyone around him. He's still one of the most sought-after actors in the world.

Eastwood shook hands and signed autographs in the theater lobby with many attendees before and after the movie. People were standing on their toes just for a glimpse of him. That was pretty easy to do as Eastwood stands approximately 6 feet 3 inches tall.

Proceeds of the benefit gala went to The Carmel Youth Center and the Variety Club of Northern California. The latter is a charity started by members of the film industry to support handicapped and critically ill children.

Merv Sutton, Carmel merchant and president of the Carmel Youth Center board, said the sold-out event should earn about $30,000, to be evenly split by the two charities.

Eastwood's new film costars Gene Hackman and Ed Harris. "Absolute Power" is based on David Baldacci's best-selling novel. In it, Eastwood portrays a sophisticated thief who accidentally witnesses the president being involved in the killing of a woman.

The festive gala featured samplings from local restaurants and Monterey County wineries. Orchestrating booths were Pamela Musgrave, Jean Darragh and friends.

And then the stretch limos arrived.

Many of Eastwood's friends were there, including his former wife, Maggie, who was escorted to the film by friends Dennis and Karen LeVett and Ron Abba. Among the crowd attending the champagne reception were Bert and Bella Cutino, Camille and Tom May (Camille had an Eastwood biography for him to sign), volunteers Maggie Hardy and Jan Hanson and Monterey County Film Commission board member Joe Anastasia.

Among the sponsors listed for the benefit were the Del Monte Shopping Center, Dale Davison, John Vanderhoff, SONY Pictures, Castle Rock Entertainment, The Carmel Pine Cone, KSBW-TV8 (Clint's wife, Dina Ruiz, was working at the station and could not attend), KWAV-96 FM, and Malpas Productions.

■ Carmel Public Library Foundation fetes Jim and Kate Lehrer

Most of the members of the Carmel Public Library Foundation happily anticipated the Carmel appearance of Jim and Kate Lehrer. Finally, on Feb. 5 and 6, they came and held "A Conversation with the Authors," at the Golden Bough Theatre in Carmel, a book signing at the Thunderbird Bookshop and a cocktail buffet was Jim Lehrer, who served as moderator of the 1996 presidential debates, is anchor of "The News Hour with Jim Lehrer" on PBS, which has won numerous journalism awards, including several Emmys. He is a playwright and author of 12 books. The latest is "White Widow," published by Random House.

Kate Lehrer grew up in Texas, where she met and married Jim. She raised three daughters and then began writing novels, short stories, articles and reviews. Her most recent novel is "Out of Eden," published by Harmony Books.

Committee chairs Marilyn M. Murphy and Mary May Alienberg introduced the honored guests at the Samson's cocktail party to the delight of all. Dick LaSalle played piano beautifully throughout the evening.

I could tell by the excitement that everyone was thrilled to have the Lehrers here. Marion Robotti reported that their appearance was one of the greatest offerings of the foundation. Robotti mentioned that next year's guest might be Walter Cronkite. What a coup!

■ Monterey County Hospitality Association explodes in a knee-slapping good time

Bar gals, floozies and others fought over guys, guns, lassos and whips Friday evening as the Monterey County Hospitality Association presented its "Big Bad John's Saloon" Roundup at the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

This is the association's annual event to recap its achievements, distribute awards, welcome the incoming president and name the Hospitality Professional of the Year. And, as usual, it is always just plain fun, fun, fun. It's great to see hard-working professionals like Tom Glidden, Ted Balestreri, Don Boston, Charles Chrietberg and Nick Lombardo kick back and relax.

Starting in the Outer Bay wing of the aquarium, where they bid on silent auction items, guests were then led on a special TexMex gourmet strolling dinner. Awaiting at various posts in the aquarium were incredibly delicious foods and libations from local bistros and wineries. Little tables with checked tablecloths were set up for diners, and as they ate, bar gals and Calamity Jane-type women fought over their men. The sheriff finally came in and quieted them down, but he looked kinda' sleazy too. All in great fun!

Following the dinner, guests devoured wonderful desserts and sat down to watch the show. And what a show! Can-can girls came in and danced fast and furiously, doing handstands, cartwheels, just taking that crowd by storm!

Then trick roper Karen Quist did some mighty turns with ropes and whips. She got some of the audience to come up and try lassoing, and they too made those ropes sing.

removed, and low-maintenance steel and concrete were used. The second award went to Roxanne Spruance of the Pebble Beach Co. for recycling more than 600,000 pounds of paper, cardboard and plastic materials each year. Its green waste composting facility recycles almost five million pounds annually.

Teel then introduced 1997 President John Lloyd. Lloyd spoke of Teel's achievements, thanking him for his great leadership. He introduced the 1997 executive committee and board of directors and outlined 1997 goals.

I knew who would be the Hospitality Professional of the Year honoree several hours before the announcement was made by last year's winner, Mark Verbonich. Chair LuAnn Meador gave me the press release to hold, saying, "Now, don't tell anyone." I sat right in back of David Fink, general manager of the Highlands Inn, as his name was called.

It was fun to watch David suddenly look up and whisper to his neighbor, "My gosh, that sounds like me." His

■ Compassion Pregnancy Center slates annual luncheon

You have formed me in my mother's womb, I will praise You, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made!

Psalms 139:13-14

I didn't know what to expect, but beheld an amazing sight. The Grand Ballroom at the Embassy Suites in Seaside was filled with almost 500 people, seated at tables, wall-to-wall last Saturday.

Calling themselves a Christian outreach ministry through the local church community, the Compassion Pregnancy Center operates as a nonprofit agency funded by individuals, churches and annual events to help women with unplanned pregnancies. They are also committed to sharing the Gospel in word and in deed.

The center opened in Pacific Grove in 1983, offering pregnancy tests, information about pregnancy and abortion, baby items and maternity clothing and many different parenting and support classes for women. Al Larson, board chairman, welcomed everyone and reported to the supporters how their gifts have been used. In 1996 they served 985 women who were in crisis for the first time, and reached 1,165 students in local schools with their "Aiming for Excellence" program.

Debbie Jones, director, described teenagers who walk in and find help from doctors, nurses and volunteers. She called the help rendered to them the unrehearsed, spirited love of Christ.

A very touching part of the program dealt with the needs of a few teenagers who told us that in spite of peer and media pressure, they wanted to wait for the mate that God has for them. That's how it was in the '30s and '40s for some of us oldies in the audience. Their stories brought a few tears to our eyes, and you could see the interest that all the parents in the audience had too. They received tremendous applause.

Guest speaker John Rankin, president of the Theological Education Institute, discussed the violence of rape and incest.

"Because the ache in our soul is not being met, we engage in smoking, drinking, sex and abortion," he said, adding "abortion only postpones the pain and makes another victim." Most people in that audience agreed with that. His speech was definitely anti-abortion. He recalled the ideas of peace, order, stability and hope as being the way to happiness for all people in the world. No one can argue with that.

The Compassion Pregnancy Center has opened a new medical clinic in Monterey where the volunteers will begin providing services in early spring.

For those who wish to volunteer, and for those who need help, call 373-8535.

Compassion Pregnancy Center Board Chairman Al Larson, guest speaker John Rankin and Executive Director Debbie Jones get ready to greet guests at the center's annual luncheon, held Saturday at the Embassy Suites in Seaside.

Figurative sculptor Frederick E. Hart to attend Hanson Gallery reception Sunday

TWO NEW SCULPTURES by Frederick E. Hart will be unveiled during a reception in his honor planned 1 to 3 p.m. Sunday at the Hanson Gallery. The artist is scheduled to attend. Hanson Gallery is on Ocean Avenue at San Carlos Street in downtown Carmel.

Hart is the creator of several major public works in Washington, D.C. 1994 marked the 10th anniversary of the completion of Hart's most well-known public monument, "Three Soldiers" at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and the 20th anniversary of the completion of "The Creation Sculptures," which grace the entrance to the National Cathedral.

Both works of art, together with a privately commissioned sculpture called "The Cross of the Millennium," were praised in "Masters of American Sculpture: The Figurative Tradition From the American Renaissance to the Millennium," a recent book written by "Duel" is a 1994 work in clear acrylic resin, stamped with foundry mark and inscribed by artist Frederick Hart.

Donald Martin Reynolds.

For additional information, contact Hanson Gallery at 625-6142.

Sotheby's specialists appraise collectibles

Sotheby's specialists will be at The Monterey Museum of Art to appraise paintings, prints, drawings, furniture, decorative arts, Asian art, jewelry and collectibles on Saturday. The Heirloom and Discovery Day is set 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. There is a $10 appraisal fee per item collected at the door, which will directly benefit the Collector's Guild of the Monterey Museum of Art.

Individuals may hand carry their property to the museum. If the piece is too cumbersome, the specialists will provide a verbal estimate based on a photograph. Individuals can bring their property in person to the museum, using the 550 Calle Principal entrance.

Award-winning oboist performs

Oboist Andrea Plesnarski, winner of last year's Carmel Music Society Instrumental Competition, will perform Tuesday at Sunset Theater in Carmel. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

Plesnarski received her bachelor of music degree from the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia where she studied with John de Lancie and Richard Woodhams.

Tuesday's program will include works by Telemann, Dutilleux, Loeffler, Britten and Pasculi.

Tickets are $5 and $10 and may be purchased by calling 625-9938 or at the door the evening of the concert.

At Grove Homes, Michael Weidner will discuss "The Art of Flower Arranging" during Saturday's "Walk-About."

'Love Your Home' walk-about planned

Pacific Grove will be the setting for a "Love Your Home" Walk-About Home and Garden Showcase on Saturday. Eleven businesses will offer demonstrations from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

In addition, there will be drawings for a framed, limited edition canvas lithograph by Thomas Kinkadee and four gift certificates for discounted custom cabinetry orders at Hayward Home Design.

Hauk Fine Arts will offer "The Care and Restoration of Historic Paintings," with conservator John Middleton Tidwell. Attendees are encouraged to bring in a treasured historic painting for a free consultation.

Among other demonstrations scheduled during the walk-about are "Creating Faux Finishes" at Timbrook Achilles, "The Art of Display" at A Great Place, an auction preview at the Auction House at Asilomar Beach, Mikita power tool demonstrations at Hayward Lumber and custom cabinetry consultation at Hayward Home Design.
